The bowl is a prime example. Take the mistaken belief that one needs gobs and gobs of power to be heard on the bowl. Not true. Water works wonders.
A decent antenna (even a simple quarter wave whip) over water (especially salt water) can do unbelievable things for your signal. Check the web out. Some will show a vertical's radiation pattern over different kinds of ground (and salt water). You wouldn't believe the difference it can make (6 dB, for instance, compared to average soil). Plus that low DX lobe will be huge. This is the sort of stuff that should be discussed. Differences between a 1/4 wave vertical, a half wave vertical, and a 5/8 wave..... 3.2 dB on the 5/8 wave.
Now, if one must,,add a tiny bit of juice,,,,,say...100 watts (I chose 100 watts as example as many legal hammie advocates have stated if radios were confined to 100 watts and stayed out of the hammie bands, no problems would likely arise) one is no longer legal, but can sound like a huge player,,,even end up on a watergate tape by mistake....now, for worldwide dx, switch it to sideband and let er' rip.....27.555 USB is an international calling frequency (known in America as the freeband) and filled with exotic DX from around the globe.
Antennas and water, water, and more water make for big gains.

Nope - Ch3 Canobolas is a UHF CB repeater in Australia - TX freq is 476.475 MHz, so yes, the relevancy to most of the NGs posted to is damn close to zero.

My first CB antenna was a RatShack mag mount in my attic. I slapped it on a piece of tin, soldered 4 nine foot wires to it, stretched it out, and did some talking. The ground plane makes all the difference. I've seen it on 27 Mhz and 151 MHz when I built a 1/4 wave for MURS. The coat hanger ground plane blew away the mobile antenna.

Well, yes and no...

A lot of what I learned about basic antenna 101 came from the earlier version ARRL Antenna Handbooks... the brown cover one. The new antenna handbook seems to be a lot more picture'ey type of book... although a lot less dry than the brown cover book I mention... it's also less straight forward. I have copies of both the original type "brown cover" and the newer one... I go back to the brown cover book more often.

I wouldn't use a hairpin match for a 5/8 or 3/4 wave antenna... Depending on it's physical size and make up. You might look at the Cushcraft type of antennas to see examples of matching rings... also the original Sigma 5/8 wave was a nice antenna. The matching ring, also known as the zing ring and other cute names is popular along with base loaded coils for 5/8 & 3/4 antennas.

The .64 wave antenna is a whole different matching approach for me. I honestly don't have or use many .64 or similar wave antennas... although I do like the standard 1/2 wave base fed.... ie the big stick and similar types.

I like the hairpin for 1/4 wave ground planes... it provides a much better match (vs a generic 1/4 wave ground plane) and DC grounding.

As you move up in down in the sections of wave lengths... say from 1/4 up toward 5/8 & 3/4 it becomes more practical to use specific matching methods and sections. Specific fractions of a wave lenght are actually pretty easy to match, hence the reason we see the common 1/4, 1/2, 5/8 & 3/4 wave antennas.

I like the hairpin because of its physical strenght... although nothing wrong with coax harness matching, I like the more rigid metal in place.

It never hurts to play around with antennas... Back in days of old... when knights were bold, the neat boxes like the MFJ antenna units were not around... we had to do it by hand. Now I can't imagine being without them...

cheers

4794. The Vanity Callsign System...& CB Radio

Hi all,

It's not often that I get pissed-off enough at Cbers in general to go on a mini-rant, but here I go.

I direct your attention to the June 2003 issue of CQ magazine, pg. 62, to be exact. It's an article re. the amateur radio vanity callsign system. "Vanity callsigns," what in hell's bells does that have to do with CB? Well, it's like this. Before there ever was a vanity callsign system, an amateur Extra petitioned the FCC to create a means for amateurs to change their callsigns for a fee. He did this because he wanted his old callsign back. His petition was denied.

He then wrote his Congressmen re. his request. He was answered by one of his Congressmen, who informed them that they were making inquiries. Well, to make a long story short, a letter jointly signed by two Congressmen was sent to the FCC chairman. It stated that they were writing "on behalf of several amateur radio operators" and pointed out that such a system would pay for itself. The kicker is that one of the Congressmen controlled the FCC budget. The result; a short time later, both the House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate approved legislation authorizing the FCC to issue unique amateur radio callsigns. When President Clinton signed the well-publicized Deficit Reduction Plan, not even the FCC noticed the short four-word line insert that read "Amateur vanity callsigns $7."

This is a clear example illustrating that one person can actually make a difference. Although the petitioner was an ARO, the league (ARRL) did not represent him. His petition was summarily denied, yet he still found a way to have the change implemented. Arguably, Cbers outnumber hams by a factor of 5:1, and that's being conservative. I just wanted to illustrate how much political and/or economic muscle the 11-meter crowd truly hasï¿½yet is unwilling (or unable) to accomplish anything with all this potential clout.

There will be many that will claim that the unlawful activities of some (many) operators will prevent this from ever happening. Although I neither condone nor encourage "freebanding" and/or illegal amplifiers, I think that's a big crock of hooey! It would take just a few moments of one's time and a postage stamp to fire off a quick letter to one's congressmen. I take it a tad farther by returning a form letter re. RM-9807 to all those who send me campaign flyers/letters at election time, but that's just me. Can anybody imagine an inquiry "on behalf of several citizen band radio operators?" I sure can. Think about it.

water or not you gotta get lucky to be heard on the bowl with 100 watts.
its possible to squeeze between keys anytime but icecolds definition of the bowl is the realist ive heard.

Hahha..no doubt about it, you gotta get lucky to be heard with only a hundred watts on the bowl,,,but I disagree with the water or no water theory...........a hundred watts over water with nothing but water on all sides of the horizon on a decent antenna,,,gets you heard, or at least it does here,,,and I'm not talking in between anyone's keys......yes, ice's definition is quite real,,,but there exist exceptions to all the rules and I just happened to have bumbled and Hello, Wendall!

There are some good links some folks have posted, so I'll not touch on that. As to licensing, that became necessary for the same reason that many years ago states started issuing drivers' licenses. With so many users, some sort of traffic control has to be brought to bear or we wouldn't be enjoying cell phones, television, radio, etc. Oh, there would be a few stations, but someone would build a bigger one to try and gain all of the listeners/viewers. Originally, with very few of those horseless carriages, there were no licenses. Ditto the airplane. The Wright brothers had no pilot's license. But, as traffic, whether air, car, or radio, increases, it is in everyone's interest to have some sort of organization to it to allow efficient usage of a limited resource.

Two GREAT links of pages written by shortwave loons:

http://www.tackamarks.freeservers.com/index.html

"true believers" of Michigan Militia (jailbird) Mark Koernkie. Better known as "Mark from Michigan" he was the MC of the old Intellegence (??) Report a now long defunct program on WGTG shortwave.
During this time it was on, Mark promoted a rather novelly kooky idea that the reflective Inventory Control Stickers affixed to the back of Michigan State
DOT road signs were actually encoded/encrypted
"tactical markers" (tacmar's) that would be used later
by UN blue helmeted foreign troops to round up Militia Patriots, bible thumpers, Seventh-Day Adventists, bad Little League coaches, UFO abductees and those bad people who "cork" MLB baseball bats... (lions and bears and tigeres OH MY!) Well, ole Mark was tossed into the slammer for ARMED BANK ROBBERY about two Years ago, but this did not stop his followers in Michigan and other "rust belt" states from latching-onto this kooky theory. Watch out for those nasty road signs with stickers on the bacsk folks! They're EEEEEEEVIL!!!!!

http://www.tackamarks.freeservers.com/photo2.html

(Note: Just to prove just how BAD these road signs are, take a look at the link above to page 2 of the aforementioned URL. Here you will see a sign whth two kids on a teeter-totter, or see-saw, which is, in Mark's militialoon follower's minds, points to the site of an NCB/WMD evacuation point.....I KID YOU NOT FOLKS!!!

Finally....what I consider to be THE MOTHER OF ALL KOOK MILITIA SITES:

HERE: http://www.raven1.net/

Chips-in-your-ass, tinfoil hats, NWO mind

621 refers to the Dewey Decimal System number used to categorize non-fiction books of an electronic nature.

The library in question is your local public library.

Sorry, you'll have to get out of your chair, or just order them online at Amazon. Of course, at the library, you get to try before you buy them!

My ego is just fine, especially after talking with my ISP while at the office paying my bill today, and finding out that nobody has complained about my alleged "threats". Now if nobody has complained then nobody has "slapped" me, as you falsely claimed. Another lie for the list.

Bert, the FCC will not do NOTHING that will expand the scope of the existing mess that is found on 11m.

Quote from FCC's reply:

"4. The Commission sought comment on Dixon's Petition on January 14, 2000. Comments and reply comments were received from CB Radio Service operators and organizations representing them, amateur radio operators and the American Radio Relay League, Inc. (ARRL), and the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB).

We note that the Commission stated it had no intention of creating a service paralleling the amateur service when it authorized the Citizens Radio Service, and it did not intend that CB Radio Service stations be used for technical radio experiments or for general contacts of a random nature. In this regard, Dixon and others state that the CB Radio Service already is used for long-distance personal convenience communications and that such use should be permitted. We also note that some individuals used the Citizens Radio Service in this manner before the Commission specifically prohibited CB Radio Service stations from communicating with distant stations. Thus, the concern expressed by the ARRL that this proposal would lessen or eliminate the core distinction between the CB Radio Service and the Amateur Radio Service is a valid concern. The Petition presents no compelling reason to propose a rule change that would undermine the purpose underlying the CB Radio Service rules. Rather, we agree with Dvork that someone wishing to engage in amateur service type communications should seek an amateur radio license and use bands that are expressly allocated for these types of communication. "

The key phase Bert is:

"that someone wishing to engage in amateur service type communications should seek an amateur radio license and use bands that are expressly allocated for these types of communication."

With the current 5 wpm CW test requirement, which might disappear after the current WRC meeting concludes, even that requirement may be removed, the Ham license is easy to get. There is NO excuse for somebody NOT to get legitimate and get licensed.

No, Twisty, it was your fixation with Leland that began your decline into insanity. Leland had the moxy to call you on your bullshit, and that was a blow to your delusions of superiority. But then I came along and did the same as Leland. For TWO people in this world to challenge your lies was so devastating that you couldn't believe it to be possible. So your weak little mind heard the cries of your shattered ego and dismissed the possibility -- it was then that I became Leland in a false reality you created so you could cope with the truth. After crossing that threshold, it was just a simple matter to project all your hateful and malicious behaviors upon him and myself, as I'm sure they had been pestering your conscience for quite some time. And now, after you have firmly established your anonymous personality as a way to cope with the reality of your wicked ways, God help Florida (or wherever you really live) if you should ever lose your internet access -- can you say, "multiple personality disorder"?

I never claimed you were anyone, but I -have- suggested that you -could- be just about anybody. Since you don't claim to be -anybody-, I could theoretically claim that you could be anybody and you can't deny it.

Yep. It proves definitively that you are a liar.

> Is it to >illustrate that when you mistakenly call someone else by other than who >they are, it is permitted, but when it is done to you, it is a "lie"?

Not when you claim that you "always tell the truth", a claim I have never made. On the contrary, I have admitted to lying in this newsgroup, and on more than one occasion. It's obvious that you can't take your OWN advice, be a man, step up to the plate and admit that you were wrong.

Will you take the other written tests right away if they remove the CW requirement?

For anyone in the area looking for a free test with the current question pool, FARC, the Frederick Amateur Radio Club, is having a test session at the Father's Day Hamfest at the Frederick County Fairgrounds. That is THIS Sunday. Weather is supposed to be nice for a change. The Fest is 8 AM to 3 PM. More info:

http://www.qsl.net/k3erm/hamfest.htm

Maybe I'll go take the General written portion. If there's time, I might try the Extra test. Won't be able to use 'em, but I'll have them and they're good for 365 days.

What, ya gettin paranoid now? I sent you an email? Why would i wanna do that alcoholic? It's a shamed that you drink to get rid of your fears, yet drinking brings on the paranoia.

You may make me famous, but i'll make you more.

Take it for what ever you want. which william? pepsi n.....jack? man, thought your ole man told you to stay off that stuff? you know he hates it when you come to bed drunk.

It's an OK radio as long as you don't want sideband. Makes for a very good talking AM radio though.

That's the spirit! I think every major Amateur group, except the one from the Russian Federation, is in favor of dumping the CW requirement. Most people expect that there is a very good chance that the CW requirement will be gone when the current WRC concludes its business, but there is no guarantee.

Well, Twist, nothing I've heard of late beats 40,000 watts output into a rhombic 200 feet in the air, 600 feet on a leg, over saltwater. My best guess is around 1,000,000 watts erp. It did the job (but I never inhaled). It did burn a hole back to the states :)

Yes but remember Twisty can get away with posting anything and then saying he didnt say it or it meant something else or it isnt true because Leland did this or that or talking about it is not the same as doing it etc etc etc

You should get neither. The Galaxy radios have power supply issues that make them unstable. Their quality control and design both suck, and you'll have them "in the shop" at least 4 times a year, guaranteed. (Just ask Dave... He'll tell ya. ::groan::)

Get something that's actually type accepted for CB and has halfway decent quality control, such as a Uniden Grant XL/LT or a PC-78. With the right antenna system, they're just as "loud" as the Galaxy's, and will last longer, and sound better, for a much longer time.

In other words, save your money.

Vic: I just won an auction for above mentioned speaker.

The speaker came with bare wire - and I'm not that swift when it comes to car installs.

what wires went where in your case? I'll adjust for MY car. Also: how did you MOUNT it?

Exactly.
Some people may not be able to fit up a base antenna. They may live in a flat or have some rule against an antenna fitted to the external walls. Using a small mobile antenna with a GP kit, possibly in the loft may be the best option for some.

Peter.

I've had a Uniden PC-122 since 1988. It's only needed to be fixed once, about 2 years ago. Got a complete factory spec realignment at that time. It's only off by about 50 cycles after bouncing around in a Jeep for a very hot summer and a very cold, snowy winter. Sideband needs stability. AM don't care if you're a couple hundred hertz off, unless someone keys with you. Then you get to hear a tone, called a heterodyne.

:) If it was THAT easy, I wouldn't have asked for help. This is an amplified speaker, so I am not only referring to the audio part, but the power part as well! (not to mention, the speaker doesn't have an EXT jack)

I have a RED wire, a YELLOW wire, a BLACK wire, a WHITE wire, a GREEN wire, a BROWN wire and an UNSHIELDED wire (around the brown)...

Thanks for trying to help, though Scott... I appreciate it!

4875. OT:Trolls

Trolls may participate in the ensuing argument, or they may simply write "Drive-by Postings".
That is to say, they will ignite the flame war and then sit back and watch the show.

Cagey net users quickly recognize trolls for what they are and warn their fellow posters that "You are being trolled" (or words to that effect). However, since there is a constant influx of new users on the net, trolls are going to be able to entertain themselves for a long time to come.

Trolls crave attention, and they care not whether it is positive or negative. They see the Internet as a mirror into which they can gaze in narcissistic rapture.

An Internet "troll" is a person who delights in sowing discord on the Internet. He (and it is usually he) tries to start arguments and upset people. Trolls see Internet communications services as convenient venues for their bizarre game. For some reason, they don't "get" that they are hurting real people. To them, other Internet users are not quite human but are a kind of digital abstraction. As a result, they feel no sorrow whatsoever for the pain they inflict.
Indeed, the greater the suffering they cause, the greater their 'achievement' (as they see it).

Trolls are utterly impervious to criticism (constructive or otherwise). You cannot negotiate with them; you cannot cause them to feel shame or compassion; you cannot reason with them. They cannot be made to feel remorse. For some reason, trolls do not feel they are bound by the rules of courtesy or social responsibility.

Perhaps this sounds inconceivable. You may think, "Surely there is something I can write that will change them." But a true troll can not be changed by mere words.

If you want a deeper analysis than that, perhaps a psychologist can shed some additional light on the matter.

Remember-You can't have a picnic without ants

DO NOT FEED THE TROLL!

What is a troll?
The term "troll" can mean a number of different things, but in essence, a troll is a person who aims to have 'pleasure' at your expense. There are two main types of trolls:

1.. people who are psychologically disturbed, and seek to feel good by making other list members feel bad. This is a sort of "psycho troll", whose deception involves deceiving themselves as well as others. In this respect, they are no different to the sorts of people we meet in everyday life who are disturbed - some of them are easy to spot, and others aren't. Such people may even use their real names on the internet, and they may not even realize that they are "trolling" because it is all subconscious.
2.. people who pretend to be someone that they are not - they create personae that you think
are real, but they know is fictitious.
Trolling can be played at various levels...

a.. Level one - "Playtime" - This is where the troller is simply out for the gratification provided by a quick "win". An example of this might be to join a list with a fictitious name, cause an argument, withdraw and then boast to friends about what he/she had done. Such trolls are relatively easy to spot because their attack or provocation is fairly blatant, and the persona is fairly two-dimensional.
b.. Level two - "Tactical" - This is where the troller takes the game more seriously, creates a credible persona with which to provoke the list, and uses recognized techniques or tactics to gain the confidence and support of individuals on the list. Provocation is subtle and invidious, so spotting this type of troll is not easy, because the persona is credible, and off-list email exchanges have caused you to believe that this person is genuine and trustworthy.
c.. Level three - "Strategic" - This is a very serious form of game, involving the production of an overall strategy that can take months or years to develop. It can also involve a number of people acting together in order to invade a list. Once a list is infested, it can be nigh impossible to work out who is a troll and who is bona fide.
d.. Level four - "Domination" - This is where the trollers' strategy extends to the creation and running of apparently bona-fide mailing lists. In such circumstances, their payoff may be the knowledge that they are dominating the emotional lives of list members, and is perhaps one of the ultimate forms of deceit that can be achieved.
It should be noted that trolling games are not restricted to the internet. Their tactics can also include contacting people in real life using snail-mail and/or telephone. The boundaries between real-life con-men and internet trolls are not as clear as they used to be.

Playtime trolls are relatively easy to spot, but they may not be apparent to the naive user.
There isn't a single set of characteristics that applies to playtime trolls, but you can look for some or all of the following signs:
a.. a lack of buy-in to the list philosophy or values
b.. generally low level of activity, with sudden spurts of interaction - or perhaps a new persona that has strong opinions on controversial subjects
c.. a mixture of friendly posts with a confrontational style of interaction
d.. the use of provocative language and sweeping generalizations about certain topics or categories of people
e.. a lack of in-depth understanding of the topic
f.. a lack of personal information
g.. a lack of a genuinely unique perspective on the topic
h.. a lack of humour
i.. restarting topics that have already been done
j.. use of language that encourages the dialogue to enter topics that are controversial and likely to upset some team members k.. the use of attention-seeking gimmick (e.g.: "I was once exploited by an XYZ")
l.. they follow up their own articles if the group doesn't respond to their posts m.. inconsistencies in the style and nature of the post and any proclaimed information (e.g.: claiming to be a child but writing with an adult style; claiming to be adult, but writing with a childish grammatical construction).
n.. also note that trolls often seem to use free email services (such as hotmail.com) or have email addresses ending in .edu.
When dealing with suspected trolls, there are various strategies that you can employ. First of all, remember that just because you suspect that someone is a troll, it doesn't mean that they are a troll; also, just because you suspect someone is genuine, it doesn't mean that they are genuine. In view of this, the best tactics are:
a.. ignore postings that you suspect may be from trolls.
b.. don't invest any of your self emotionally until you have verified beyond all doubt that the person you are dealing with is genuine c.. beware of off list emails that praise and flatter, or seem to evoke sympathy. If you feel yourself beginning to like someone, ask first: how much verifiable data do I have about them?
d.. if you do get involved in anyone, seek out verifiable data. Trolls will provide some data that will lead to dead ends; real people will provide some data that is open-ended and leads to a myriad of sources which enable you to verify their genuine status e.. if you must respond to a troll posting, don't get involved in the argument; limit it to pointing out that the posting may be considered as trollish, for the benefit of other list members.
f.. Write to the listmaster to highlight what is happening

g.. Write to the postmaster of the troll's domain. Keep it simple, polite and to the point (they are very busy!). Include your evidence (e.g.: offensive emails) and the full email header information, so that the troll can be properly traced.
h.. Listmasters can also make their lists restricted, and conduct a security analysis of each list application before allowing them to subscribe. This is probably easier to do in areas that have professional associations or qualifications.

I went out and bought the CD-to-cassette adaptor and it works great! While I can't listen to the AM/FM at the same time as the scanner, I don't find that to be a problem. The adaptor is around 20 bucks at Radio Shack, 15 bucks at Wal-Mart. Or for around $30-50 you can buy a portable CD player w/car kit that includes the adaptor, and then you'll have a CD player for you cassette-equipped vehicle.

I plug my Trunktracker into the MP3 jack on the front of my car stereo.

140 watts of public service action. I can hear my scanner with the top down at 60 MPH.

4889. Front Fender Mounting

I have a 97 F250 HD and want to mount my CB antenna on the left front fender. I want to use a mount that fits between the seem of the hood and the fender, a pretty common mount. My questions are:
Is that a good location? I don't want to mount it to the rear fender.
What antenna would you recommend for that situation?
Thanks.

What? I can't use a scope probe as a screwdriver??

I've got a guy up here who bought his first CB, a Uniden PC-33 in 1996. Now he's a "big wig". Made it all the way to VE. He had to learn the answers to the technical stuff. I already know that stuff. Have the certificate from a vocational school for electronics. My brother is into electronics, so I was "born with a resistor in my hand".

In light of the many perversions and jokes we send to one another for a laugh, this is a little different: This is not intended to be a joke, it's not funny, it's intended to get you thinking.

Billy Graham's daughter was interviewed on the Early Show and Jane Clayson asked her "How could God let something like this happen?" (regarding the attacks on Sept. 11).

Anne Graham gave an extremely profound and insightful response. She said "I believe God is deeply saddened by this, just as we are, but for years we've been telling God to get out of our schools, to get out of our government and to get out of our lives.

And being the gentleman He is, I believe He has calmly backed out. How can we expect God to give us His blessing and His protection if we demand He leave us alone?"

In light of recent events...terrorists attack, school shootings, etc. I think it started when Madeleine Murray O'Hare (she was murdered, her body found recently) complained she didn't want prayer in our schools, and we said OK.

Then someone said you better not read the Bible in school ... the Bible says thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not steal, and love your neighbor as yourself. And we said OK.

Then Dr. Benjamin Spock said we shouldn't spank our children when they misbehave because their little personalities would be warped and we might damage their self-esteem (Dr. Spock's son committed suicide). We said an expert should know what he's talking about. And we said OK.

Then someone said teachers and principals better not discipline our children when they misbehave. The school administrators said no faculty member in this school better touch a student when they misbehave because we don't want any bad publicity, and we surely don't want to be sued (there's a big difference between disciplining, touching, beating, smacking, humiliating, kicking, etc.). And we said OK.

Then someone said, let's let our daughters have abortions if they want, and they won't even have to tell their parents. And we said OK.

Then some wise school board member said, since boys will be boys and they're going to do it anyway, let's give our sons all the condoms they want so they can have all the fun they desire, and we won't have to tell their parents they got them at school. And we said OK.

Then some of our top elected officials said it doesn't matter what we do in private as long as we do our jobs. Agreeing with them, we said it doesn't matter to me what anyone, including the President, does in private as long as I have a job and the economy is good.

Then someone said let's print magazines with pictures of nude women and call it wholesome, down-to-earth appreciation for the beauty of the female body. And we said OK.

And then someone else took that appreciation a step further and published pictures of nude children and then further again by making them available on the Internet. And we said OK, they're entitled to free speech.

Then the entertainment industry said, let's make TV shows and movies that promote profanity, violence, and illicit sex. Let's record music that encourages rape, drugs, murder, suicide, and satanic themes. And we said it's just entertainment, it has no adverse effect, nobody takes it seriously anyway, so go right ahead.

Now we're asking ourselves why our children have no conscience, why they don't know right from wrong, and why it doesn't bother them to kill strangers, their classmates, and themselves.

Probably, if we think about it long and hard enough, we can figure it out. I think it has a great deal to do with "WE REAP WHAT WE SOW."

Funny how simple it is for people to trash God and then wonder why the world's going to hell. Funny how we believe what the newspapers say, but question what the Bible says.

Funny how you can send 'jokes' through e-mail and they spread like wildfire but when you start sending messages regarding the Lord, people think twice about sharing.

Funny how lewd, crude, vulgar and obscene articles pass freely through cyberspace, but public discussion of God is suppressed in the school and workplace.

Are you laughing?

Funny how when you forward this message, you will not send it to many on your address list because you're not sure what they believe, or what they WILL think of you for sending it. Funny how we can be more worried about what other people think of us than what God thinks of us.

Pass it on if you think it has merit. If not then just discard it... no one will know you did. But, if you discard this thought process, don't sit back and complain about what bad shape the world is in!

Next time try listing it under Ham Transievers....I expect your auction will be cancelled in a very short period of time....
Wont get yanked if it's in Ham Transievers...You may want to see if you can change the category before someone bids on it...i know they allow some modification to the auction.
Good luck...nice radio.

Wrong. I'll attack anyone that defends Twisty. There's a difference. And I happen to agree with a lot of what Scott says around here regardless of his

Well, in case you didn't notice, I didn't post ANY reply to Scott's post, attack absolutely nothing to do with you? Are you just telling me how and what you

How about the left front bumper and use a 9' whip? It won't scratch the paint and you'll have a better (and probably less expensive) antenna.

Well, it's like this... (hasn't changed in a while)

1) I don't care about amps, if they are clean.
2) I don't care about freebanders. They should stay above 40. Below 1 is US Gov't.
3) There is no reason to cuss. There are 1/2 million words in the English language.
I'm sure you can find something else to say.
4) It's all radio. Folks that talk on it are the same on both sides of the fence.
5) I'm not Aaron. I would rather print a flyer and send them to truckstops. Put something in the driver's hands to guide them to use their radio better.

I've been on CB since 1977. I've seen a lot of changes. Some good. Most bad.
Nobody cares about anyone except themselves these days, and that's too bad.

I've had good luck letting drivers know that 36 through 40 are for sideband
by an old gentleman's agreement. Most drivers don't know that. They've never been told. Maybe they've never been told to stay below 28 Mhz. Education is key.

Yeah but the average Cber cant tell a clean amp from a dirty amp and doesnt want to learn the difference, which is why it makes sense that they are banned, unless your like Toll Free or Skipp who thinks only the elite should use amps on CB. And even a clean amp is going to do some damage to people with stock radios trying to use the other 39 channels if they are nearby to the guy running big watts. the citzens band was never designed for high power. fcc set up close channel spacing and low power so everyone can use it, not just the guys with clean but overpowered radios.Think Scott, think, use that mind of yours, LOL.

Whatever WE want, George. I used RM-9807 because it's a perfect example. It wasn't asking for the legalization of "freebanding" and/or amps, it merely asked for the decriminalization of a naturally occuring phenomenon. That's really kinda beside the point. The CQ article just really struck home re. how much potential political and economic clout CBers could wield, yet nobody seems willing to pull on the same side of the rope.

Who is "they," George? I'm part of "they" and I want rules? Better yet, I want rules enforced. (Don't let me get on my taxpayer rant.)

I don't believe that. If the appropriate pressure was brought to bear correctly, anything is possible. BTW, I don't really care for the broad generalization. The "existing mess" certainly does not apply to all of 11-meters.

Pretty petty, in my opinion. If allowing folks to legally communicate via a naturally occuring phenomenon within a 440 kHz slice (Channelized, at that.) with a whopping 12 watts P.E.P. is "engaging in amateur service type communications," it really doesn't say a hell of a lot for how the FCC views the ARS.

I concur with your point re. how easy it is, however, as I explained above...I don't really equate the two based on DX comms. Not to appear abrasive, Leland...but if it's that easy...?

What spirit is that, Leland? Wait long enough and the big bad 5-wpm code test will go away. I'd hardly call that spirit. Someone who decides to "get it done" rather than whine and wait is exhibiting "spirit."

I am having difficulties with this channel mod, (Dwight D base) see this for the instructions i got..
http://www.geocities.com/SiliconValley/Port/1158/858mod.htm pin #19 does not go to ground (on my radio) do I have to ground it after the cut? ,and the cut on #21, does it go toward the chip or away? and there is nothing soldered on pin 20......
Seems like the only extra channels i can get is the 27.455 -27.805
ALL i need is 26.855-26.955..i need a SIMPLE solution..one switch if posible..
SOMEONE HELP, it's driving me nuts..I will send drawing of my layout to whoever will help me..
email me at horseflygk@att.net

You -can- solder cells together, providing you do it properly. Radio Control car people do it all the time to make battery packs:

He's a HAM.. In NY the law exempts HAMs from being ticketed & charged for having such equipment. Same laws in Michigan, Indiana, Minnesota, and Florida, all exempt HAMs from being charged for having such equipment in their vehicles.

Therefore, his scanner wasn't illegal.

But thanks for the comments.

I still stand by my opinion that ignorance of the law is no excuse, unless you're a cop....

P.S. I have used a screwdriver as a scope probe, in a pinch, before.

I do. Even when they are clean they dominate more real-estate than allowed, forcing legal operators to other channels (assuming the other channels are clear). And amps are illegal.

>2) I don't care about freebanders. They should stay above 40. Below 1 is US Gov't.

Between 40 and 10m has both commercial and government assignments. And freebanding is illegal.

>3) There is no reason to cuss. There are 1/2 million words in the English language.
> I'm sure you can find something else to say.

A person's choice of words is just that: their choice. How I -respond- to their choice of words is -my- choice. However, profanity on the radio is illegal.

>4) It's all radio.

Radio, yes. Communication, no. Some people think radio is an RF drag race, or a place to play grade-school games like king-of-the-hill, or a curtain to hide behind while annoying others in order to get some attention (it's not suprising why there are so many anonymous people in a CB newsgroup).

> Folks that talk on it are the same on both sides of the fence.

They are not the same. Some have respect for the law, for other CBers, and/or for the intended purpose of CB radio. Other's don't.

>5) I'm not Aaron. I would rather print a flyer and send them to truckstops. Put > something in the driver's hands to guide them to use their radio better.

Some need guidance. Some don't. Some need positive reinforcement. Some need disapprobation. Some need to seek their nearest mental health provider.

>I've been on CB since 1977. I've seen a lot of changes. Some good. Most bad.
>Nobody cares about anyone except themselves these days, and that's too bad.

I wouldn't say 'nobody'. The state of CB, not to mention society in general, is certainly disappointing, but far from hopeless.

>I've had good luck letting drivers know that 36 through 40 are for sideband
>by an old gentleman's agreement. Most drivers don't know that. They've never

In case you missed several thousand posts in the past few years, and forgotten what you said just before in your post, many people already 'know' but just don't care. Education is fine if people are willing to use it. I.e, you can teach a man to fish, but that may not stop him from begging. OTOH, if you teach him how to fish, chase him off the streets and discourage everyone else from giving him handouts, you just might see him get off his lazy ass and do the right thing.

are you saying an action because it is involving a naturally occuring phenomenon should be legalized? I supose you could argue that locomotion is a naturally occuring phenomenon in people and why should we have to wait at crosswalks to cross? Or why should we be restricted by no trespassing signs LOL?

I always hook my radio to the fuse panel with continuous power, that way no need for key to be on for power on radio. I sometimes forget to cut it off,

I'm saying this particular action should be legalized.

Too broad and refers to public safety.

My problems are:
1. Hungarian libraries dont know the Dewey Decimal System.
2. Hungarian libraries contain only at least 20 years old technical books.
3. I have 5 brothers and 12 sisters, we hardly get something to eat so I dont have money to order a book from amazon.

That is, why I am looking for a good, big online tutorial about rf and other circuits.
Any idea?
Thanks

Works great....

EVERY time you solder to the cells, you damage them.
You cannot achieve wetting temperature, without also achieving melting temperature of the insulators inside.

That damage may or may not cause immediate failure, but it is there, and it is not reversible.

Never gonna happen bert. the fcc lawyers are not stupid even though Alan Dixon thinks they are. They know that removing the 155 mile rule would be the proverbial foot in the door. Better to keep that door closed. Want to dx? Take an easy test and get a ham license.

Gotta keep on knockin' though, hope you understand. Nothing wrong with making the effort.

Ham radio is about so much more than "DX." IMHO, I don't believe allowing DX comms. on the CB dtracts in any way, shape, or form from amateur radio. Take care and have a happy Father's day. ;-)

Why Mrs. Buttbreath I didn't make up that definition, that was University of Texas and other internet sites.
He's no where near that, but you fit almost every

If you drill a hole, DON'T put it in a corner.. it'll rust faster..
Keep the hole one to two feet away from the side of the vehicle.

4985. My new GMRS/FRS Columbia CB Radio(s) quick question(s)

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2003-06-16 02:09:04 UTC
From: EnterANote <enter_a_note@not.now.okay.com>
Message-ID: <4F9Ha.101489$x67.4192853@twister.socal.rr.com>
Source record: 160405
Cross-posted to: rec.radio.cb,rec.ham-radio.packet

At Fry's they had this deal, 25$ for 2 Columbia GMRS/FRS 22 Channel 2-Way Radio
with 25$ mail-in rebate.

I basically got them for free.

I noticed that on Chnl 20 I get ham people talking about Traffic during traffic
hours and giving heads-up on what's goin on.

Than driving around I catch other people talking, but I can't talk to them.
While I scanned one day around my neighborhood, I guy started talking and I responded. It actually worked... We communicated till I went out of range. He thought that I was someone else.. I played along.

Why am I hearing HAM people on my CB and how did it happen for me to talk the 3rd guy...

These handhelds are very small and use them only when driving around or go snowboarding, car-to-car instead of cell.

I was curious in something more power, and the option of actually being able to talk... to others.

One time at a gas station I saw this low/small car loaded with antennas in the back. At least 3 with one that was at least 6+ ft long.

On this CB I also hear request to another party to check FWY such and such for traffic than they respond with... on this steet/fwy there is a 2 or 3 car collision and one of them it's a "Type of car" and name...
I know it's ham because when they say goodbye they pitch in their CODE name...

I also thought buying this type of CB I would be able to catch some cordless telephone conversations, which I know it's not a nice thing to do or sort of invasion of privacy. Although I hear stories that it's amazing what you can catch with some scanners/hams that people are not aware of.

Thanks for any feedback and suggestions.

You liked it too. I thought it was very well done. I liked the part when the statement

For sale:
These 7 crystals were pulled from Tube type CB radios over the years.
They are in Great shape but I do not know what radios they are for?
Here is what it says on them, some are James Knight & texas brand, A few even say "LAF" for Lafayette(?). The Frequencies are only correct if used in the CB radios that they were intended for.
17T
5T, 27.015
27.085
20T, 27.205
27.215
22T, 27.225
13R, 28.765
I hope someone can use them :-)

I can write about how many posts there are in the transsexual newsgroups with your email address. Or I could quote some of your previous profanity-filled posts with some of your holier-than-thou posts. Or I could count the number of posts where you argue with or whine about George, then add your post whining about other people doing the same thing. "How can you equate that with trolling?" Well, if you can't, then don't complain if and when it happens.

Didn't you just get done telling me in another post how you CAN'T tell me what I can and can't post? Or was that someone else.... nope, it was you alright. So what's the deal -- is Twisty paying you to divert attention away from his blunders? Or are you just whining about me cause you are really bored and have nothing better to do?

That wasn't trolling, that wasn't anything to do with trolling, how do you equate that with trolling as you are right now? You can't but just to argue.

Or I could quote some of your previous profanity-filled > posts with some of your holier-than-thou posts.

Ok, how many? Ten? Twenty? Thirty? Over nine years, If that many, but when it comes to you know who, that does that in a day sometimes, that's a troll. So please, don't even try that equation.

> Or I could count the number of > posts where you argue with or whine about George, then add your post whining > about other people doing the same thing.

Again, I try me best to not argue with him anymore, it's losing battle with a troll.

> "How can you equate that with > trolling?" Well, if you can't, then don't complain if and when it happens.

Again, as stated above, you can be very logical and make very good statements about radio's & antenna's but you really shouldn't troll. Just like this post, you are strictly trolling.
As since I made my point, I will not reply to anymore of your responses in this thread, so fell free to bait the hook.

Where did I accuse you of spamming? What proof

Trolling, spamming, same difference -- you whine about George doing it and now you are whining about me doing it.

What happened to your sig file, Shark? How come the end of your posts no longer end with this?:

>Beware of George Busch WA3MOJ of Allentown Pa.

>Abuse@giganews.com Abuse@Comcast.com and >complain about how this person is using false headers >with references to their services to by pass newsreaders >filters.

And after you started whining about my "trolling" the past few days, how do I know that you aren't going to do the same to me? I don't. BTW, Voobner isn't "George". In fact, "George" isn't George. So don't talk to ME about PROOF!

No, Shark, don't respond to any more of my posts in ANY thread. Go right ahead and killfile me, just like you did several times before, and like you did to "George" about a hundred times, you hypocrite!

What's the difference between heat and temperature?

Welding puts a very small amount of heat into the can, while raising a small area to a high temperature.

Soldering puts a large amount of heat into the can, while raising a large area to a much lower temperature.

Channels above 14 are GMRS. GMRS is a licensed service. You need a license to legally use those channels. You were not hearing ham callsigns, but rather GMRS call signs.

You cannot hear phone conversations. Cordless phones use entirely different frequencies than FRS/GMRS. The scan function on these radios does not turn the radio into a "scanner" per se. It will only scan the specific frequencies used by these radios. You would need a "real scanner" to receive anything else.

Which group of the ten it is crossposted to would that be?
aus.radio.broadcast? aus.radio.cb? aus.radio.scanner? One of the other seven?

I would bet David was reading it in rec.radio.amateur.antenna -- also in the crosspost list.

Look at the attribution above to learn where I read it.

Which nicely showcases your weakness of character and mind.
Realizing there are folks like myself that do not tolerate others telling them what they can and can not post or talk about is really doing a job on you. Feelings of inferiority have now reduced you to making threats against anyone that dares question anything about you or your actions.
Your threat that one may not express their views or express support for one of your choosing, tantamount to your lack of intellect and hypersensitivity responsible for your personal feelings concerning overwhelm.

When you realize that your behavior will not be tolerated and your demands and threats fall on deaf ears, you will begin to heal, not before. You fail to comprehend because your ego is so heavily involved. It is the hallmark of a control freak to assuage their ego.

>There's a difference.

Sure there is,,you illustrate inabilities, lack of control, and frustration caused by me pointing out your impotence.

>And I happen to agree with a lot of what Scott >says around here regardless of his pro-illegal

>At least most of his posts are on-topic, unlike >your's which mostly seem to be complaints >about George, and lately about me, too.

You are the one that introduced major hostility in the group in the last week and it began with the sharing of your ignorance concerning my use of the English language......yet there you sit casting stones concerning another's "complaint" about Geogre........LoL!

"If he didn't

>Well, in case you didn't notice,

Your problem is radiating through, Frankie,,,getting noticed has always been a problem for you,,,,so you set about it the only manner in which you know no better.

>I didn't post

>ANY reply to Scott's post, attack or otherwise.

>And why are you trying to get mixed up in a >disagreement that has absolutely nothing to >do with you?

There is no disagreement Frankie, just your little waged imagined battles. What you post on a public group is anyone's business who chooses to make it such, despite your pathetic and failed attempts at positioning yourself and fancying yourself as group censor, keeper of the FAQS, little Ceasar,.bossanova, dictator of usenet and lord of rec.radio.cb.

>Are you just telling me how and what you think >I should post before you go whining to my

>ISP? I really think you should leave this alone, >Shark.

What you think is irrelevant. Of your myriad of posts directed toward myself this past weekend, you allowed a single post to get by you absent of the GST and direct from Time Warner...I suggest you take your time and think about what you are doing instead of blindly screwing up because of blind rage you can't control anyways. Yeling "action - reaction" may temporarily soothe your ego, but does nothing for your shared demonstrations of no self-control. This past weekend appears to be but a showcase display of your anger and grand impotence.

Your constant, incessant blathering about off-topic drivel goes against your precious "rule adhering", but you have double standards,,,a set for yourself and set for others....you redundantly beg for others to adhere to cb rules while you break your neck violating usenet protocol and etiquette. Prove me wrong.

The fact you feel you can demand others post in such a manner that you approve of, is illustrative of your problems from yesteryear.
You more than likely were one of those children who had milksop parents,,,you know the type,,they probably told you that you were the center of the universe and that everyone has to bow to your demands..lol...it has rendered you dysfunctional as an adult, with communication deficits you fail to not only overcome, but recognize.

You may continue to note my past posts or behavior when discussing an issue with one that is not ego-stripped or mildly retarded, or with one who demonstrates that they are a decent person not concerned with the personal lives of those you worship.

Hell, it used to be fun when your mad clique had control over who could come here and what questions they were permitted to ask, eh Frankie?. What made it interesting was when it was no longer a question or post that suited your myopic views, or came from a really green novice,,,you would put that person down by humiliating them and your little followers of N8, Lelnad and Geogre thought it cute and followed suit. How proud you must be to show off such disabilities and not even be aware.

Perhaps if you had been raised better, and were strong of mind, character, and integrity, the ability to to set your ego aside would not evade you. You would allow folks to post as they wish to post and stop trying to control everyone.

Now, run along and do what you do best, and try not to screw up with your postings, keep your anger in check,, and do try to make a post every once in a while that is not offensive..perhaps even on topic :)

These aren't hams. Hams do not have code names. They have call signs assigned by the Federal Communications Commission.

Family Radio Service (FRS) is for ordinary people to use to communicate over short distances - about 2-3 blocks. No license is needed. That's why it is short range and low power, so they don't interfere with serious communications systems. It is a little like the old CB, but not the same thing.

GMRS is a licensed service. "more serious" It uses some of the same channels you can listen to. That's why they can't hear you. They have more power, better equipment, real antennas and pay to get the license.

Do a search for more information on FRS and GMRS and / or find a newsgroup for them. This newsgroup is for Ham/Amateur digital communications called packet also have admantly stated my main ISP is Mindspring. In addition, you have positively claimed that my headers somehow connect to his and are identical. As of later, you most recently asked Scott if he was I. And you are N7VCF, but I don;t blame you for attempting to hide it.

  Anyone can see how you can be mistaken for Lelnad, as you both have threatened the group in the exact same manner, you both demonstrate a propensity for no tolerance of opposing views, you both reflexively blame yourselves, and you both attack those who correct your may posts, and you both attack on a personal levelthose who may point out your ill-behavior. You both hate being forced to view yourselves as others do. The communication deficits you each suffer from manifests in both your inabilities to separate debate from personal feelings

>But nobody else made that mistake, Twist.

Touche...same with you calling me "Roger". Only you made that mistake.
Same with my "true" isp. Only YOU continue to be ate up over your ignorance concerning our identities,,or, I should clarify and say MY identity....LOL

>And you did despite my repeated claims to Natch. Your claims are all constructed of malice and personal feelings of inadequacy originating with deep problems rooted in your psyche, rendering them invalid and biased.

>the contrary, many of which were made long

>before you first responded to any of my posts

>or me to yours.

Exactly. When you make a claim,,the polar opposite has been found to be true.
You are suggesting that snapping at another and wrongly accusing them is acceptable only when it originates from your lair of fecal matter.

Concerning you and Lelnad...,,you both lie, you both troll, are partial to hide-n-seek games (expressing the juvenile mentality) and toss stones, you both are angry lids, and you both have threatened the group in the same exact manner on several occasions and you both are easily defeated by truth.

>No, Twisty,

Yes, Frankie, you both have most definitely threatened the group and several folks that are part of it.

>Leland had the moxy to call you on your

>bullshit, and that was a blow to your delusions >of superiority.

But Frankie, how could that be when Lelnad brought my article to the group?
You see, he brought what you refer to as "bullshit",,not I.
HE went searching on anything he could find on me, not unlike yourself.
He brought such "bullshit" as you refer, to the group.
You see, there was nothing for Lelnad to "call".....until he shared his lack of tolerance for what he reads..he even slammed PopComm as being responsible, which I may add, you accused me of writing for..... .you have seized upon the most jaundiced of justifications (lelnad's behavior) to position yourself as my inferior.

>But then I came along and did the same as

Sure did, but only faster. You had no choice but to admit such, as your threats were presented side by side and they are almost identical in nature to Lelnad's,,so,,yes, you did do the same thing as Lelnad...you made the same threats and were shown how weak of character one, such as yourself, must be to be reduced to threatening others in retaliation for a post you can not handle.

So that is what happened with this guy named Roger that apparently cleaned your clock..hehe..your projections now directed toward another..several isps later, you are beginning to "cope". You now indulge your fear.
>After crossing that threshold, it was just a >simple matter to project all your hateful and >malicious behaviors upon him and myself,

Umm,, your're the one ate up with yourself Frankie, being rude, obtrusive, arrogant, calling names, cursing, off-topic rants, threats....In one cowering swoop you have managed to place yourself in the I-am -not-worthy-so-I-must-grovel-to-make-people-notice-me role...the role of the sycophant.
You are the one that demonstrated a staggering ignorance of education that manifested and peaked in an unprovoked attack upon myslelf concerning proper grammar use.

>as I'm sure they had been pestering your >conscience for quite some time.

LOL..yes, you and Lelnad possess such ability to affect my conscience and you have no problem demonstrating the concern I hold for each of your impotent mannerisms.

>And now, after you have firmly established

>your anonymous personality

This is what makes watching you jump worth while. I'm only anonymous to those who know no better. Several folks here have met me and know my name, Frankie,,that's not so anonymous. Take it a step further,,,,,one would think that if you were any type of decent person at all, someone would have clued you in by now, but they haven't Frank,,,not one person has clued you in,,,,,,,,,,,,and it eats at you. One would think that at least one person wouldtoss you a bone out of proverbial pity,,but no,,that hasn't even occurred...LOL.
You must not really be all that well-liked, Frankie boy, but this is no startling revelation to thee.
Cb is anonymous, get over it. Just because you realize you are full of problems, you need to feel as if others share your deficits in communications and mild retardations...it's your need for acceptance by others.,,,your ego.

>as a way to cope with the reality of your >wicked ways, God help Florida

Your sharing your inferiority feelings concerning being left out of the loop again, Frankie boy.

>if you should ever lose your >internet access

We know, Frankie, we know,,you couldn't contain your excitement and your chimney would go off and you would achieve release. But,,the question is, would it bring anywhere near the pleasure you derive from condescension aimed at others who see you as you see yourself?

>-- can you say, "multiple >personality disorder"?

That forte has long belonged to the voobs named faves,,yourself, Geogre, N8, and Hall.
Frankie, those feelings of inferiority, may be responsible for your need to behave as such, with your shills.
 Now, to place
things in proper and truthful perspective that renders you incompetent and impotent, I see you are obsessing on the "who am I" game
It

>was YOUR game, Twist, not mine. And you >lost that one, too.

Gee Frankie, even Lelnad isn't as stupid as to buy the batch of spoiled goods you desperately are attempting to peddle.....affliction over identity has always been your forte,,,noted by the voob himself.
  It necessitates an ego bathing for your lowly self.
You also, have accused me of being several others.

>I never claimed you were anyone, but I -have->suggested that you -could- be just about >anybody.

Incorrect. You insisted (read: accused) I was a "Roger from WV". I see the liquid courage is affecting your memory and claims. If you wouldn't lie so much, you would be able to remember what you said.

>Since you don't claim to be -anybody-,

Lol.....to you I claim nothing,,,,,you can not get past the notion that I don't account to you..it is responsible for your self-destruction via our entertainment pleasure.
You are seen as a jealous has-been, a lid, one who may have some decent information on technical ittems at times, but it has been collectively decided that in 99 percent of your posts, it isn;t worth wading through the bullshit for what you have to say. Eitner,as have others, have illustrated the incompetence you hold in your own self-professed areas of expertise....by mentioning his name maliciously, and others that have you coiled and hissing, you efffectively share your inability to communicate effectively.

>I could theoretically claim that you could be >anybody and you can't deny it.

Is this post some type point?

>Yep. It proves definitively that you are a liar.

Good thing your word is so golden around here...LOL.
Is it to illustrate that when you mistakenly call someone else by other than who they are, it is permitted, but when it is done to you, it is a "lie"?

>Not when you claim that you "always tell the >truth", a claim I have never made.

Semantics,,you are now attempting to hold my opinions as gospel....lol...how did thy come to worship me so? Lelnad is doing a fantastic job at recruitment since doctrinizing my freeband article into deity-like status.
  Implementing your attempted lelnad logic, you must admit to frequent and intentional lying, as you most certainly insisted I was a Roger in WV with mindspring. If an outright accusation from yourself can now be looked upon by yourself as a simple "suggestion", it must be applied evenly to all, not just hypocritically to yourself when it suits your agenda..
This is the part where you snip and cry uncontrollably as 'ol Twist is illustrating your lidness and hypocrisy and making you adhere to the rules you invented.

>On the contrary, I have admitted to lying in this >newsgroup, and on more than one occasion.

You had no choice....your lies were adamant and obvious, and full of malice of a persoanl nature having nothing to do with cb. And therein is your sig...of course, once a liar always a liar.

>It's obvious that you can't take your OWN >advice, be a man, step up to the plate and >admit that you were wrong.

LOL,,doesn't work that way Frankie,,,you are being made to adhere to your own rules you invented and I love it,,it neatly wraps you up and presents you in the tidy little hypocritical package that has always underminded and nullified your posts. Twist on!

>And you shall, I'm sure.

As long as I have weak individuals like you that feel they know what is best and how others should conform to their ideas of what is accetable, I will continue to rock your world.
==========
"...but I admitted I was wrong, Like a man! Something you and QRM have a problem with. You guys are wrong and you both know it and are both too small to admit it."

>#3: The disagreement between Twistedhed

>and myself is none of your business.

There was no disagreement, Frank, You came gunning for me while screaming your English ignorance to the world,,taking issue, of all things, of my proper word usage, which, for some reason, had you acting like a junkie in delirium tremors. Educating you on the proper grammar technique proved your accusations wrong (illustrating your ignorance) and you then snapped....you haven't made a single cohernet post on topic since. Your patterns are always the same,,,someone corrects you and your twisted psyche fails,,,,it' can't grasp such shock and awe,,,you then initiate a campaign of malice against the individual that proved you incompetent..it's your life story and partly responsible for why you are always angry,,,,you;re always wrong so someone is always correcting you.

>If you

>now choose to defend that low-life and make it >your business, I will make you my business as >well, and I will be all over your posts just as

The threat just like Lelnad made.
You both also threatened the group,,Lelnad threatened the return of N8 and his porn spamming, and you threatened the group with sponge-voob.

>And you have unequivocally stated I am a hammie in WV, named Roger.

No I didn't. I have always said that you could be anybody, even Wiseman. You might even be Dwight Stewart. Heck, you might even be ME.... come to think of it, if you keep accusing me of being other people, someday you might just accuse me of being YOU! LOL!

> You
>also have admantly stated my main ISP is Mindspring.

Actually I said Mindspring when I meant Earthlink, but I came to that conclusion with good reason. You see, the first time you ever posted a header you did so to prove that I was Leland by showing that we both used Supernews, which to you was rock-solid proof that we were the same person (not like Supernews has hundreds of thousands of subscribers -- you must have came up with that idea while foraging in the mushroom patch!). But when you posted our headers you didn't delete the Path, which points right to Earthlink:

http://groups.google.com/groups?hl=en&lr=&ie=UTF-8&safe=off&selm=16705-3AE183E6-10%40store full-127.iap.bryant.webtv.net

You posted a few more until, I assume, someone alerted you to your error. After that there has never been a Path in any of the headers you have posted.

> In addition, you
>identical.

You both use (or used) Earthlink, and that's the same logic YOU used to say that Leland and I were the same person. I could have said you were anybody that used Earthlink, but I took my picks from radio newsgroups, so the list I posted included Wiseman AS WELL AS two anonymous personalities. As far as I'm concerned, the possibility still exists that you are any and/or all of them. But I don't dismiss the possibility that you could be Bill Clinton, Sandy Duncan, or just some Cuban that washed ashore after the raft sank.

> As of later, you most recently asked Scott if he was I.

Twice. And he never answered.

> And
>you are N7VCF, but I don;t blame you for attempting to hide it.

Doesn't the Florida welfare system give you at least a minimal amount of optical coverage? Well, borrow a magnifying glass from your neighbor and take another look at the pictures. If that isn't enough, look at the coverage areas for all my ISPs -- none of them cover Issaquah. I think even Nebout is finally realizing the truth that I'm not N7VCF, so why is it taking you so long? Is it that you can't accept and admit that you are wrong? (gee, what is the possibility of THAT happening -- LOL!)

Well, I checked the archives, and it was brought to the group by an anonymous mibx account under the name of "TwistieProsecutor@court.tv". But that brings up another interesting observation: You wrote that article under the freebander call of "RS 1175", and you said that "the ONLY numbers I ever use are 1175 and 988". Now looking back just a bit, wasn't there a poster on the group named "Explorer 1175" using an AOL account? Hmmm... that wouldn't be you, would it? Maybe you picked the number because it is the last four digits of the telephone number for your CB shop and you thought you would use that number for easy association, a basic advertising technique?

http://groups.google.com/groups?hl=en&lr=&ie=UTF-8&safe=off&selm=19980203074501.CAA10607%40ladder02.news.aol.com

Hmmm.... Clearwater, Florida.... How interesting. And what do you know -- he uses an AOL account, too! Gee, Twist, looks like you have had lots of identities in this newsgroup over the years, no wonder you can't accept it when someone tells the truth!

>You see, he brought what you refer to as "bullshit",,not I.

That's ALL you have brought here, Twist... er, Mike.

DX Gone Crazy? International DX on the eleven meter and free-band is there for the taking just about everyday on sideband. AM is also giving up rare contacts. But one of the better known frequencies for international DX contacts, 27.555 USB, once a jewel of pleasant listening and international contacts, has unfortunately deteriorated rapidly over the last few months, morphing itself into a vile cesspool, spewing forth all it's bile and waste, due to a small, intellectually-challenged, rapid group of angry, self-loathing and pathetic operators who have taken it upon themselves to take up a permanent-like residential status there, and in the process, completely abdicated any civil, polite conversation.

27.555 has long been an international world wide contact frequency. Standard protocol has always dictated one makes a contact and QSY's to another frequency for their conversation, thus leaving the call frequency open at all times for contacts.

This small but nefarious group is attempting to jam, interfere, and prevent any DX contacts from being made on frequency.

In case you haven't listened in on 555 as of late, the frequency has literally become a key down fest with language that one would be embarrassed to hear in the company of children, while only those blowing ridiculous amounts of power are being heard. Some incredibly rare and difficult DX contacts have effectively been nullified because so many operators are choosing to fight fire with fire....in other words, many are pumping up their wattage rather than surrender the frequency.

While I can somewhat empathize with the operators who are attempting to defend this bit of DX space, especially the ones who are located outside of the U.S. and are permitted to transmit there,

I can't seem to shake the old adage that keeps playing in my mind, "If you are not part of the solution, you are part of the problem."

Power wars are not going to solve anything. The frequency has so much trash on it that it is already beginning to sound like the frequencies many have attempted to elude.

While 27.555 used to be an everyday stop during my channel surfing activities, it no longer is. Oh, I occasionally flip there in hopes that the channel may somehow have become civilized again, but as soon as I hear the hate and discontent, I no longer have the patience to listen for a far off exotic station just to have them get keyed on as they give the frequency they are QSYing to. It is easier to change the frequency.

Other operators around the world are also gravitating to nearby and other frequencies. In the last 2 weeks, I have heard France, Italy, Germany, the U.K., and Holland comment on what a sad state 27.555 has become due to the selfish and inconsiderate actions of a few.

27.415 to 27.595 is yielding great DX. It appears that operators are still making their contacts, they are just working a little harder to get them.

Instead of relying strictly on 555, many long time ops who USED to utilize that frequency exclusively are found hovering close by.

Since January, I have counted no less than 30 countries on frequencies close to 555. While 38 LSB(27.385) continues to be a productive DX channel, it mirrors 555 in language, harassment and abuse. Not surprisingly, the perpetrators on 38 claim the same geographical locale as the offenders on 555, which is more than likely true, as I noticed that when the skip conditions begin to fade from the blathering idiots on 555, the same occurs on 38 with said offenders. I can say one thing with absolute certainty, the offending signals are coming from the southwest U.S.

Of all the DX and countries I have ever heard, I find myself embarrassed for our own operators here in the states.

The high profile spectrum splatterers usually get their clue, one way or another.

Unfortunately, for many fine operators and listeners it doesn't come soon enough. Rather than retaliate with gobs of power, it is simply easier to find another frequency until the problem rights itself.

While some may continue to pull out the A/C mauls, this is actually compounding the problem. If no one would react to these types and totally ignore them they would long tire of talking to themselves. But I guess that is just the optimist in me.

The flames continue to be fanned, albeit not always intentionally, by ops who feel it is their right to "give back what is being doled out."

There are no easy answers. As stated priorly, there are many other frequencies yielding great DX. Here are a few heard as of late. A good hint to use while searching for long distance DX is to move s-l-o-w-l-y and if possible, in 5 kHz steps. If you believe the solar scientists, the current cycle is now projected to peak around May or June. If this prediction proves accurate, this should give us some more time to enjoy the incredible skip propagation that has been the norm as of late.

I continue to receive e-mail concerning the comments I made about some of the larger radio distribution companies and the still-unfounded-rumors of a litany of back orders. Judging by some of the responses I received, it is inevitable that there is a basis of truth to the allegations concerning a connection between easily modifieable 10 meter radios and companies not having them in stock.

However, it appears that this is confined to just one or two companies at this time.

Keep sending me your personal experiences about backorders. So far, they range from the slight inconveniences to the outrageous(3 months or more), I will compile all I receive in an honest effort to find out if these experiences are due to increased pressure from the Feds or just attributed to shoddy customer service.

Feel free to share your thoughts with me on this or an other subject you my wish. If you wish a reply, please provide a valid e-mail address. 3s from Keyholder's Korner,

Dear GW...you may wish to seriously rethink your obtuse and inane diatribe, lest you look like the complete fool that you no doubt are.

First of all moron, as far as your Canadian teams winning the Stanley Cup...keep in mind that many many players on those Yankee teams are Canadian.

Secondly, you should consider your country's collective education and intelligence when referring to us Canadian "pinheads", if you got your Yankee head out of your own countrys ass and took in some of the world around you (outside your US of A) you would know that as far as the rest of the world goes...you are some of the most uneducated, backward thinking and collectively low scoring (as far as testing goes) bunch of pinheads there are! You Yankees wouldn't know the Louvre from the Parthenon if your lives depended on it! LOL

Thirdly, your earlier comments about our "anti war diatribe" really make me laugh. First off we are still only country to effectively invade your country and burn down your White House...but you wouldnt have a clue about that since all "your" education system teaches you...is how America has only ever been champion of any conflict it has entered! Which brings me to my fourth point...isnt it funny how all this ranting about Canada not joining you in your liberation of Iraq (by the way found Saddam yet?) is such a bad thing and we Canadians are so unsupportive of the US? Hmmm...well I guess your "education" system is lacking again, for back at the start of World War II...YOUR so called "great" country sat on it fat ass while the rest of the free world was fighting against a little guy by name of Adolf Hitler...in fact your country was called upon time and time again back then to help only to sit on it fat ass and do nothing...and only when you had YOUR asses kicked at Pearl Harbour...did you get into the fight. But I guess you were told differently? Something about American jumped into fight against both Japan and Germany with both hands tied behind its back and won the fight entirely on its own perhaps? LOL

Get real, grow up and realize there are rip off artists all over the planet fool.

Jeez, almost a complete personality change, from a benign, informative

Who dictated this protocol? Or do you mean "stadard practice"? Facts? Sources? Quotes?

... as opposed to 'off-frequency'? How do you know it is a group, and how do you know it is small? How many are in the group? Facts? Sources? Quotes?

Well, then they are breaking the rules. But then so is everyone on that frequency, so your point is 'nullified'. And do you understand the concept of 'tense'? How about 'surrendering'?

Good adage. Practice what you preach.

Elude? How does one 'elude' a frequency? How about 'avoid'?

How do you know this? What's the source of your certainty? And what makes you think that they will not find you on another freq? Like you said yourself, it's the free-band, and they have just as much 'right' to it as you do -- none!

You should be, just as you should be embarrassed about your own

Leave one yourself.

So you think you are a journalist? You don't know a subject from a predicate from a prepositional phrase! You don't even understand half the words you purchased with that bounced check. All you do in your 'article' is whine about how illegal operators are screwing with other illegal operators, and that makes it nothing more than an opinion. You fail to cite and quote sources or facts, and state only your highly subjective conclusions. This isn't suprising because that's all you do on this ng.

Your paragraphs have no structure. Your points are not seperate, nor are they in any particular order. You almost have a draft for an introduction: it does grab the attention, but you jump right into your subjective whining, which tells the reader that your piece is filled with your opinions and conclusions, and you are not going to let the reader make up his/her own mind. But again, that's not a suprise, because again, that's just what you do in this ng.

The only fans you will get from writing this article are people that like to cry about the same thing you cry about. That's not journalism, and you are hardly a journalist. You are a delusional redneck radio pirate that is desperately searching for self-importance and social acceptance. Pack your bags, twistie, you ain't gonna find it here!

Hello Skipp:

Really.....

Let me know about the Kreco Antennas, I have found a good one still up, but not used, a VHF model.

I have the Hustler antenna problem fixed, too, long story.

An easy one to use is the rubber grommet plugging the hole used for the clutch, if you have an automatic transmission. In most vehicles, it is large enough to run several wires through if you need to.

It was a rhetorical question. But even if you took it literally, a simple 'no' would have been fine.

Used to be my son from Jamestown. On top of the mountian running a Ranger AR-3500, D-104 Silver Eagle and Thunderbolt 305 through a omni nearly 300 ft in the air spoke all over the country. Was the best station I ever owned, better than Tram, better than my Browning.

That liquid courage is really melting your mind.

You could never be me, Frankie,,I have too many cb friends, but you may

You didn't clarify, nor did you ascertain such when you made the mindspring, you said I was he, and in addition claimed I had mindspring as my "real" isp..no maybes , buts, or clarifications existed

You really don't know what you mean, Frankie.
You never know how to properly express yourself, Frankie, you respond

It wasn't the first time I posted a header, but your use of the word
"finally" in your thread title speaks volumes of your past impotence, as the word "finally" lends the notion that you have been failing quite some time at,,,,,(gasp),,what else? Ol' twist's identity. It also lends the notion that others are interested in the same malady that has you obsessing on such topics,,couple this with your swimming in twisted

Nice for you to pint out such errors,,,,,it was the same erroneous conclusion you made concerning my webtv IP numbers prior to my educating share the same exact numbers in the same manner that you shared supernews before being tossed for conduct in violation of their rules..

Sure there is, frankie,,,just cause you're too ignorant to find them doesn't mean they do not exist..the demonstration has been repeated time must not exist. Webtv never had earthlink headers, Frankie,,,,,you ought

Your continual denials, especially when the call hasn't even been mentioned.
Ring it through google (you google swimmer, you) and the call comes up more often in YOUR posts than anyone elses.

>Is it that you can't accept and admit that you

Not at all....a belief can not be wrong, despite your failed pathetic positioning of portraying a belief as a lie.

 Anyone can see how you can be mistaken for Lelnad, as you both have threatened the group in the exact same manner, you both demonstrate a propensity for no tolerance of opposing views, you both reflexively blame yourselves, and you both attack those who correct your may posts, and you both attack on a personal levelthose who may point out your ill-behavior. You both hate being forced to view yourselves as others do. The communication deficits you each suffer from manifests in both your inabilities to separate debate from personal feelings

>But nobody else made that mistake, Twist.

>Only you.

Touche...same with you calling me "Roger". Only you made that mistake. Same with my "true" isp. Only YOU continue to be ate up over your ignorance concerning our identities,,or, I should clarify and say MY identity....LOL

>But YOU still think I'm N7VCF!

Continuing to demonstrate what "I" believe, think, or say, does nothing but illustrate how I lord over you to the point of rendering you incoherent and how my actions and beliefs take precedent in your life, most certainly over your actions in this forum. It caused you to come gunning for me, unprovoked in any manner whatsoever, over your ignorant knowledge of English grammar, of all things.

>And you did despite my repeated claims to Natch. Your claims are all constructed of malice and personal feelings of inadequacy originating with deep problems rooted in your psyche, rendering them invalid and biased.

>the contrary, many of which were made long

>before you first responded to any of my posts

>or me to yours.

Exactly. When you make a claim,,the polar opposite has been found to be true.

>More projection, Twist. You really need to >seek a professional about that problem.

You are suggesting that snapping at another and wrongly accusing them is acceptable only when it originates from your lair of fecal matter. Concerning you and Lelnad...,,you both lie, you both troll, are partial to hide-n-seek games (expressing the juvenile mentality) and toss stones, you both are angry lids, and you both have threatened the group in the same exact manner on several occasions and you both are easily defeated by truth.

>No, Twisty,

Yes, Frankie, you both have most definitely threatened the group and several folks that are part of it.

>Leland had the moxy to call you on your

But Frankie, how could that be when Lelnad brought my article to the group?

>Well, I checked the archives, and it was >brought to the group by an anonymous mibx

>account under the name of >"TwistieProsecutor@court.tv".

You weren't thorough enough, illustrating your incompetence. Keep checking and you will find the post where Lelnad not only admits such, but gives his stated malicious reason for bringing the article to the group.

>But that brings up another interesting

Hard to handle one thing at a time and remain relevant and focused when it's shown how wrong you are, eh Frankie?

>You wrote that article under the

Yes, but as you and Geogre and many others are now well aware, I dropped the numbers altogether and now use only the moniker you and Lelnad made world-wide famous..."Twisted, twisted, and more twisted....sitting here looking like this, twisting my head." It is much more recognizable and many have stated on the air "Are you the same..."...LOL!

Gee Frankie, you're paranoia has you felching far and wide.

You see, Lelnad brought what you refer to as "bullshit",,not I.

>That's ALL you have brought here, Twist... er,

>Mike.

Not at all..see, if you would slow down and comprehend what you read, you would see and know Lelnad brought to the group what you refer to as "bullshit", not I. Your blind attempted leap at defending Lelnad's admitted actions
is all one needs for reasonable deduction of your method and agenda..
I, however, brought an uncanny ability to get down on cb and have lids like yourself flock to my side to worship. You can call me Ray, or you can call me Jay,,,,,or even Mike.....or Frasso..or,,whatever it takes to make your ego feel good these days of sorrow that descend upon you.

No Frankie,,,you're lies are spreading and you are burning yourself. YOU brought YOUR problems to my plate in the form of a hemorrhage over my grammar use (of all things) that forced you to come gunning for me maliciously and totally unprovoked. For the two weeks since, you have been on a tangent swimming in twisted juice via google because you thought you knew something and were shown you were wrong. The embarrassment was more than your already damaged ego could take and you couldn't handle it,,,your mental health slipped and yo began another campaign of hate and malice directed toward myslef, but as usual, managed only to illustrate your mild retardation, communication deficits, and now, ignorance that you demand remain with you.

Anti Twisty campaign? I havent said anything to the goof for quite sometime.
You need to distinguish who is who on this NG Junior. So far your doing a poor job.

I thought of that, but is impractical, not to mention ugly as sin, (I know
I know) as I drive the truck to work and have to park in a garage. I had a 102" whip on my old 97 F150 mounted to the left rear quarter panel and could tie it down. Truck got totaled by someone so now I am looking to add an

Quit changing the subject. We were talking about ILLEGAL ACTIVITIES, not legal wastewater treatment plants.

Legal ones yes. Illegal ones, no.

Given your slant on things, Yahoo should allow the "Bankrobber's of America Group", or the "Terrorist's Bombmaking Tips Group".

This group has been in existance for only a few weeks now... but now that the light of day is being placed on it, I don't expect it to last more than a few more weeks.

5097. Twisty does damage control

So what's all the tracing about, Twist? To prove your ignorance? GST (TWT) is an upper-level provider, or 'backbone'. Kind of like an "internet wholesaler". Aimcomm is the "retailer".

It doesn't say Seattle, does it? Portland? Vancouver? Issaquah? Nope. Thanks for proving your ignorance and my ISP!

<snip>

>What's even funnier is that your headers show the same path as KC8JBO, >Mr. K, Foghorn,
>and twisties real ISP

Then why haven't you whined about me claiming you were Mr. K or Foghorn? Because I didn't. All I did was make an observation, pointing out a coincidence. You know what a 'coincidence' is, don't you Twisty? You know, like when you see that Leland and I both use Supernews, or like Glenn Sparks' last name being similar to 'Sparky', or like two similar legal cases in the same state (gee, what are the chances of THAT happening!), or even if two people have the same name. Well guess what, Twisty: I used to post through Supernews because that was the news service provider for my previous ISP, which is why all my posts had "cet.com" in the header. AND, there are literally HUNDREDS of newsgroup posters that use the name Sparky, and they can't ALL be Glenn Sparks. And if you had bothered to verify both legal cases (Clark County and City of Spokane), you would see that both cases did happen, as well as plenty of other similar cases all around the country. AND, if you check directories like InfoSpace or Switchboard, they will cough up a couple dozen or so people with the name Frank Gilliland, and those are just the ones that are listed. So you are good at finding coincidences, but that's all they are.

<snip unintelligible mess created by Twisty's improper newsgroup quoting>

What's to blame? I'm not him. Ask him yourself. (Oh, that's right, you said you already did, right before you started using his call in forgeries to accuse me of child molestation!) QRZ says there are two hams named Frank Gilliland: Frank C, N7VCF, and Frank W, N0IGZ (Joplin, MO). So why did you pick N7VCF, Twisty? Because I live in Spokane? Gee, now THAT makes a whole lot of sense. Almost as much as if you picked Frank C. because my name is Frank D. And did you forget that I'm not even a ham? Well, if I'm not a ham then I MUST be N7VCF, right Twist?

ROTFLMMFAO!!!! Now THAT'S RICH! So it doesn't matter AT ALL what the FACTS are, you simple CHOOSE TO BELIEVE that I'm N7VCF? HAHAHAHA!!!! Hey Twist, putting all your semantic escape tactics aside, try this: choose to believe that you can breathe water, prove it, and THEN tell me "a belief can not be wrong"!!!! (You're probably dumb enough to try it, too!)

Let's assume you are right (even though you aren't). If I was to say that:

A. You have stated that I am five different people;
B. I can't be five different people;
C. Therefore, at least four of those statements are not true.

When A and B are true (and they are), is there ANY possibility that C is false, and the argument is somehow invalid? Of course not. Is there ANY way that bias or malicious motivations can somehow invalidate that argument? None at all. OTOH, what does the fact that you have been wrong about my identity at LEAST FOUR TIMES do to your argument that I'm N7VCF, an argument based only upon your BELIEF (LOL!)? It doesn't help it, that's for sure.

<snip more screwed-up quoting> state and I couldn't care less what kind of weather they are having.

You're lies are spreading and you are burning yourself. YOU brought YOUR

Two very funny CB websites created by the same great British author.
Both have been recently updated too.

I missed the beginning of this thread. Why are they calling this group illegal ? What about free speech ? BTW, tons of people that I know run heat...so what.....BFD.....Why do people still whine and cry like little commie pussies every time someone gets up ? Hell I bet there are a bunch of 11m amp groups on the many forums through out the net...BFD...who really gives a fuck if folks are dscussing 11m amps. Just about any 10m amp will work just fine and there are a ton of books on the subject. I don't care how much people moan and grip about illegal radios and amps, nothing will ever be done..so just deal with it. The FCC doesn't seem to care, they havn't for quite sometime. IMO, these same people bitch about power, also call the FCC everytime they hear a foul word spoken on the band.

Absolutely true. It is my life-long ambition. When I was a toddler, all I wanted to do with my life was to seek your attention and to live my life according to your edicts. My world is complete now that you have given me permission to fulfill just one of your desires. You have filled the void in my life that was Again, absolutely true. Why? Because you can't accept the truth that I have never lied about my identity, probably because you have accused me of being so many people. And the only person with that problem is you, Twist (Tim doesn't count because he's the keyclown's pet lemming -- but at least the kid has enough integrity to put his name to his words, and is respected for that -- something that you will never understand).

> You

I really don't care what you believe, Twist. It's a matter of your dissemination of lies about other people, including myself.

> You are coming apart, your posts aren't getting the >attention they used to,

Not by you -- that's because I keep disproving your lies. Like your claim that I am still enlisted in the USMC, and you proved yourself totally ignorant on that issue. When that failed, you claimed that my discharge was less than honorable, another lie conceived in desperation. You also claimed that I was a hammie because I work a band that not only isn't a ham band, but isn't even regulated by the FCC. Damn, I should make another list the lies you have made just within the past couple months....

>,probably because of the lack of intellect to be

It would be far better to be a bad ham than a lying anonymous troll with a limited vocabulary, poor cognitive skills, an obsession with Leland, and an ego that's more fragile than Mideast peace.

You don't really expect me to belive otherwise do you?! After all that was the whole point of Alan Dixon's RM, the elimination of the 155 mile DX contact limit.

>Not to appear abrasive, Leland...but if it's that easy...?

Yes it is THAT EASY. I would rather see people licensed, thus held accountable for their on-air actions, than the current mess. Besides being licensed does bring some legal protection for the licensed operator that doesn't exist for the overpowered, and or out of band, operator. If the want HF access, OK, then take the test. I don't really care if they take it now with the CW requirement, or later with out it, if and when it is dropped. It doesn't matter to me either way.

Wrong parse.

Not Illegal group about 11m amps, but group about illegal 11m amps.

Any 11m amp is illegal though, so it's maybe redundant.

Fairly pointless anyway, if 5W won't get you there on 11, 1500 won't help much.
Unless you're trying to shout down your neighbor, in which case it seems REALLY pointless.

Bert was commenting about a "possible" change in test requirements. I don't consider the dropping of CW testing as a "freebie". Test requirements for all sorts of things have changed over the years, and when that happens people don't consider it a "freebie". I don't see why any changes in the Ham licensing system should be considered any different.

So all you really need is some motivation to take the test. I know some smart people who would make good Hams, but just can't see any reason to waste time learning CW so they never bother with it. For them the motivation maybe the elimination of the CW test requirement. I would say that many new, or younger, Hams don't care if the newly licensed Ham's background was a Freebander etc. just so long as they now conduct themselves as a Ham per Part 97. Many of use don't really care if that Extra Class Ticket was done at 20 wpm, 5 wpm, or soon 0 wpm. Some of my Ham buddies are ex-Freebanders, and I don't have a problem with it. They don't operate illegally anymore. As far as I'm concerned I'd reather have progress over perfection. They made the switch and seem to be much happer about it. They can spin some good stories around the coffee table about their old freebanding days!

ROTFLMAO !! I have shot skip on 5 watts many times.
Power is not the issue with me, I prefer to run QRP, however sometimes ya just have to give it some gas. As for the net nannys, fuck um !!!
Yahoo hears this crap all the time and they don't care. The 11m amp group will be around as long as the list owner keeps it running. Sure some cop (the FCC doesn't have the time or the funds) may try to set up stings by trying to buy amps. But this is a long shot because any amp the works on 10m will work on 11m and yahoo groups is *INTERNATIONAL" and in A LOT of other countries it is legal to run power on 11m. Therefore there is NOTHING illegal about an 11m amp e-mail list. Sorry net nanny Frank, you lose !!

Oh really ?
At night, yes it is quit. but in the daytime there is 8 to 9 db of hetrodyne. One does not need 1000watts to over come this noise, 50 to 100 watts is fine.

So how do you figure people who were caught selling 11 meter amps got busted? How come they didn't just say "any amp that works on 10m will work on 11m, nyah nyah"?

Which countries?

I do live in a remote area. On top of my own 4000' mountain. nearest neighbor is 1/2 mile away. I used to bleed hs stuff bigtime at 500 watts and over. I installed an in-line filter and this stoped. All day long I get 8 to 10 db of noise. Not from the U.S., but from Mexico and South America. Since they have no amp laws, but come in here so loud that I can't here my wife 2 miles away, So I'm forced to run power. However, out of respect for the band, I turn it down at night, unless needed for DX or long distance base to moble commos. As far as a ham ticket, Not all my friends (people I talk to on the CB) are willing to get HAM tickets to run power. Plus my wife and kids are not willing to get ham tickets. So CB radio is the way to go for me. Cell phones don't work all that well where I live due to the mountains, but the 11m radio wave does in fact prognigate well over the mountains.

Do you know why there is 8 to 9 db of noise and hetrodyne? Because of all the assholes running amps. Imagine if they all were running 4 watts What an asshole you are North.

Post some proof of your alegations. Don't you think they hear us as well with 50 kw amps, kw amps splatter boxes? Have you ever asked any of them do we interfere with them as well? Nah I didn't think so.

>So I'm forced to run power.

No one is forcing you to break the law. Get a different means of communication. You live on a 4000' mountian right? Put up your own repeater and get a ham license. But that is to hard right that would require thought on your part. Hell it is easier to turn on your amp and sit here and complain about how your forced to run power.

Why do you respect the band at night?

Again breaking the law is not needed, you just prefer to do it.

They don't have to run power to be a ham, many qrp it i much quieter, more people repect the rules on those bands .

>Plus my wife and kids are not willing to get ham tickets. So CB radio is

There are many different forms to communicate with your with and kids if that is what you want to do, again 4000' mountian GMRS/FRS service repeater

Here's the station list:
For the CB band,
Hy-Gain 8 Base.
FMJ tuner
Swan Mk 8 amp.
Swan 150 watt driver.
PDC-600 RF scanner.
An old homebrew antenna switch.
FMJ HF filter.

Antenna(s):
Jo-Gun Hillbilly stick
Jo-Gun Killer cross 8.
Both antennas are on their own 35' towers.
(I have found that beams work the best in my area right at 35 foot.
Same with the ground plane.)

My other station.
(all glass)
Reciever: Hammarlund super pro 600
Hooked to a real hammarlund reflected coil di-pole.
Transmitter: Heathkit DX-100B (with 11m) Amp: Homebrew (4 3-500Zs) no driver is needed to run this amp because the transmitter has enough drive.

FMJ tuner
I use another homebrew antenna switch into 4 precut di-poles (I can work 2 bands per di-pole via tuner)

This station is not used often, It sits here collecting dust, but I light it up on sundays in the winter.

It's simply what I believe. I simply don't have a problem with allowing DX contacts on the legal 40 @ 12 watts P.E.P. using a FCC type-accepted rig.

I agree wholeheartedly!

Again, agreed.

Don't look now, Leland...but they've GOT HF access. The FCC's unenforceable rule neither changes the location of 27 MHz nor human nature. You just can't legislate propagation. It's a damn shame 11-meter hobbyists can't seem to pull on the same side of the rope wrt leveraging some political and/or economic muscle. You'd likely see some newfound flexibility wrt 27 MHz CB's intended basis and purpose.

I hear only two countries are in favor of actually dropping it all together. The remaining majority favor a modification. Keepin' my fingers crossed for CW's retention.

Mopar, just in case folks think this is st, one guy (years ago) used to run phone patches back to the states from Guam Island - running only 20 watts! I remember one time when a friend (who is blind) was over at my parents' house (we were kids in our teens) and I had the transmitter in 'standby' (not tune - which would have run a watt or so). I heard a group from the South and simply send a 'dit'. Yep, 'qrz'. Can't be me. So, I sent the call in standby and sure enough, the group heard me just fine. I was running milliwatts into a longwire several hundred feet long made of 8 gauge wire. If 85 watts is sufficient for moonbounce (it has been done), you don't even need a whole watt if the band is open. Argue all you wish. BTW, I called a guy whose call I recognized from the Rochester area on 10 meters (from Guam Island). I was running 12 watts output (on the power meter - don't ask if it was Bird watts). He came back and said he'd try if it was a local call as I was weak. I hit the afterburner and pumped it up to a gallon. The poor guy came back and said he nearly lost the speaker cone :) I won't touch on the subject of 40,000 watts output to that rhombic (which ran phone patches just fine on 20 watts). :)

A harmonics filter (the harmonics are what bleeds TVs, etc)
A filter will clean up a dirty signal and help reduce spatter.

Sometimes I'll work both 75m and 40m. off one di-pole
I have worked 12m and 20m off one di-pole, but I had a high SWR reading on 20m (well in the center of 20m I do, but it looks good on the lower end of the band.)
BTW, I hold a ticket, Will I post my call ? Fuck no !!

Everyone knows 11 meter amps are illegal to sell and use on CB. That doesnt leave you with much of a comeback, so I guess you must attack Stewart now.

No problem, we'll probably see your call soon in the FCC enforcement logs. That's where hams who operate high-profile "illegal CB stations" end up.

That makes about as much sense as setting fire to a slum and telling the tenants that rules don't apply.

LOL, I stopped trying to beat them a long time ago. Hell, I even called the FCC on a fellow cber one time. The lady at the FCC told me
"We are powerless to do anything about it, we are powerless to enforce the laws concerning the CB band" then she started to lecture me on how to fix my own electronics to filter out the bleed over.
After that I joined the ranks of the outlaws on the chicken band and been happier ever since.

I often ask those around me if I tear their shit up. At one time I did bigtime so then I installed the harmonics filter and I stopped tearing up their shit. Now everyones happy.
I don't drop the maul on people, I don't try to play CB DJ, and hog the band. Its the old saying "if you want to get down, then you have to get up !" If all I need is 50 watts then thats what I run, If I need 2 KW then thats what I run. No big deal.

ROTFLOL, worst thing (for you) you could have done was to get a ham ticket. The FCC loves to go after hams who are outlaw CBers, especially ones who brag they can't get caught, laugh at the FCC, etc. Wm. Flippo was the most well known, but there are others more recent if you care to read about them, the links can be provided. But of course you won't, you'll keep bragging, which is how you'll get ID'd and bagged and then I'll LOL.

I've never bragged, oh and I don't laugh at the FCC, I just don't worry about them.
I've been doing this for a real long time, and have yet to hear even a

You mean gripe, a grip is what you have on your undersized weenie which

A relative of mine actually has only one ear due to an infection and I can see him doing just that to somebody he knew.
Or he might come back with, "Uh no wait a minute. Ok. They're on now."

5183. SWR/Power/Matcher meter problem. Help!?

I've got a Rama sw-008 cant find any reference on the web about it but i understand how to work it for cb use.

The one thing i dont get is its a matcher as well which has a switch THRU & MATCHER.
Thru for swr measurements etc but when switched to Matcher i match it down on the tuning knobs to 1:1 thats fine but it seems to cut out RF going to antenna as the normal hash going thru the CB disappears on Matcher. I flick switch back to THRU and the swr is not tuned & normal hash returns.
Currently i have a swr of 1:2 anyway so not all bad.
Whats up with this or am i doing something wrong?

If you can help it, use the THRU position. There is some insertion loss with the matcher. Matchers are in a way low tech tuners. They are good for using a broadband radio on a narrow band antenna. I.E. a converted 10m radio on a 102 steel whip tuned for the CB band. As long as you stay within the CB band your ok, but when you use channels farther away from the CB band, your SWRs will rise. When this happens you can use the matcher to lower the SWRs and save the RFO transistors on your radio.
IMO, you are not doing anything wrong, its just the insertion loss caused by the tuning cap in the matcher.

The first thing to remember is that a dummy load can give you an SWR of 1:1, but it doesn't make a very good antenna. The SW-008 (like most RAMAs) is a cheap unit; I noticed that the matcher has no bandswitch, meaning that if the circuit uses a pi tank then the coil is fixed, and could be either too large or too small for proper matching at 27 MHz. In other words, the matcher is working more like a dummy load than a matcher. If the unit was designed for 27 MHz, it's possible that it has been modified for a ham band such as 15, 10, 6 or 2 meters.
It's also possible that you have an RF grounding problem, and by tuning the system to resonance you are getting -less- RF on the antenna than before (which can happen if you are using the wrong antenna). And it's even possible that the unit is broke.

An SWR of 2:1 isn't as bad as you might think. Use the THRU position and don't sweat the SWR. If you want to tune your antenna for the best efficiency, forget the SWR meter and use a field strength meter.

Well, I have never said that I'm not a CBer. I am, and I have said so on many occasions. I have talked about the radios I use (many of which are vintage tube-type), and even posted a page on my website about an antenna I built for my station.

But I am not a ham. Every time I start thinking about getting my ticket I just listen to the whine-nets on 40 and 20 meters and the urge goes away.

I think it's a keyclown term that stands for 'Radio Frequency Output', probably intended to refer to RF power transistors. Poor choice of words, since many RF power transistors are not 'output' stages. And did you notice his bit about "insertion loss caused by the tuning cap in the matcher"? LOL! The plates must be made from carbon!

You must understand there are a few that are here with nothing to offer other than insults, accusation in other words..... Troll.

"Trolls may participate in the ensuing argument, or they may simply write "Drive-by Postings".
That is to say, they will ignite the flame war and then sit back and watch the show.

Cagey net users quickly recognize trolls for what they are and warn their fellow posters that
"You are being trolled" (or words to that effect). However, since there is a constant influx of new users on the net, trolls are going to be able to entertain themselves for a long time to come.

Trolls crave attention, and they care not whether it is positive or negative. They see the Internet as a mirror into which they can gaze in narcissistic rapture.

An Internet "troll" is a person who delights in sowing discord on the Internet. He (and it is usually he) tries to start arguments and upset people. Trolls see Internet communications services as convenient venues for their bizarre game. For some reason, they don't "get" that
of digital abstraction. As a result, they feel no sorrow whatsoever for the pain they inflict.
Indeed, the greater the suffering they cause, the greater their 'achievement' (as they see it).

Trolls are utterly impervious to criticism (constructive or otherwise). You cannot negotiate with them; you cannot cause them to feel shame or compassion; you cannot reason with them. They cannot be made to feel remorse. For some reason, trolls do not feel they are bound by the rules of courtesy or social responsibility.

Perhaps this sounds inconceivable. You may think, "Surely there is something I can write that will change them." But a true troll can not be changed by mere words.

If you want a deeper analysis than that, perhaps a psychologist can shed some additional light on the matter.

DO NOT FEED THE TROLL!

What is a troll?
The term "troll" can mean a number of different things, but in essence, a troll is a person who aims to have 'pleasure' at your expense. There are two main types of trolls:

1.. people who are psychologically disturbed, and seek to feel good by making other list members feel bad. This is a sort of "psycho troll", whose deception involves deceiving themselves as well as others. In this respect, they are no different to the sorts of people we meet in everyday life who are disturbed - some of them are easy to spot, and others aren't. Such people may even use their real names on the internet, and they may not even realize that they are "trolling" because it is all subconscious.
2.. people who pretend to be someone that they are not - they create personae that you think
are real, but they know is fictitious.
Trolling can be played at various levels...."

I too, would like to talk to someone on FM.
Haven't talked to anyone since getting this radio.

I will be listening for you. I am in Dallas.

When one is as dumb as you, it's easy to make mistakes.

When you hide behind a remailer, don't keep misspelling "their" as "thier".

Kane,
First, I'm not sure what you mean by the "RF" and the "hash" going to the antenna is cut back. If you mean that power output seems to be less than without the 'matcher', that's possible and not necessarily a problem. If the "hash" is the noise you notmally hear on the air, then you may have a problem with the 'matcher', or you may not be tuning the 'matcher' correctly. A 'matcher' or tuner won't reduce the normal noise you hear on a frequency.
Tuners are not frequency sensitive except in a very broad sense. They may only be usable in a limited frequency range, such as HF, or VHF, though. They may also be limited in the range of impedances that they can change to 50 ohms (the narrower ranged tuners are usually called "line flatteners"). And they can certainly be limited in power handling ability.
From what you have described, I would suspect that you may be incorrectly adjusting the 'matcher', or it's defective (there is more than one 'spot' where the SWR will 'dip', so you have to be sure you have the correct adjustment with the lowest 'dip'). If you haven't yet, take the lid off of it and look for charred, discolored, burned, or obvious shorts/opens, or things that are "not right".
Most 'CB' matchers/tuners are not exactly the 'best' in the world and are very limited in power handling ability.
They are very easily ruined if operated out of range because of the very high voltages found in a matcher/tuner that's being operated correctly. Matchers/tuners have to be physically large because of the size of the components necessary to handle the normal voltages found in a tuner. If yours is in a small box, then don't expect much from it. Sorry 'bout that, but that's how it is...

You, me, and a plethora of radio brethren interested in preserving the integrity it's mere existence brings to the HF band via hammie radio. It is not perfect, but it is definitely a weeding process. To do away with it would further dilute what is already partially contaminated.

Not at all. Follow your first thread back and you will see where you took issue with my grammar use prior to Dick being mentioned. You attacked me unprovoked, with malice,profanity, and ignorance. I illustrated your lack of knowledge concerning your attack on my grammar use by educating you on English Grammar vs Latin where the rule you spoke of originated but does not translate to English, especially American-slang English (which, we use in America). This caused your overt concern and menstruation. The conversation concerning Dick came later, and yes, Dick most certainly did set forth his call in case we "work something really rare". Of course he said it, and we knew he said it tongue-in-cheek, nevertheless, it illustrates the grand supremacy of his wisdom, accuracy of his posts, and diplomacy,,..you exemplify the antithesis.

So you current Cobra 2000 owners...

Is the current model the same exact 2000 radio from the 80's and 90's..?
... with the 858 chip inside..?

I know the mfgr would probably have to change the PLL Chip if they wanted to revise the radio. Since it's still a current model, I was curious to know if it's still the same radio with the 858 on board..?

Any info from the group..? (please post it here and I'll read it).

Frankie, frankie,,,no one is whining about identities except you.

Of course it's true, yet you are projecting your whining onto your

Why? (chuckle) No one cares,,you need not explain "why" you project your inadequacies..really.

>And the only person with that problem is you,

How can I have a problem I'm not aware of? Hint for Frankie: I can't.
The problem, as always illustrated and demonstrated by yourself, is all yours concerning what I believe. Clearly a demonsration of a battered ego that relies too heavily on others views instead of his own.

>Twist (Tim doesn't count because he's the

>keyclown's pet lemming

Gee Frankie,,,,couldn't get through an entire post without resorting to making up terms as no other way to express yourself...it's called a communication deficit. Those who are unable to efffectively make their needs, wishes, wants, and opinions known, may resort to "inventing" new words or terms exclusive to others who suffer or share like maladies....an involuntary mechanism triggered as some sort therapeutic avoidance of self-ridicule.

>-- but at least the kid has enough integrity to

Something you obviously care a great deal of and attribute great importance to,,,others are more concerned with the integrity of a post, and identity has nothing to do with such,,,,do we need revisit Thomas Paine's contributions to the US of A merely to illustrate your ignorance in confusing integrity with identity and misusing the words as synonyms and that others share this staggering example of paranoia?
Most of us are contempt in knowing who the liars are,, forced to admit

You
chose the topic, Frankie, not I, so if anyone is whining, it is your failed self. You are the one that brought up how important my beliefs are to you.

>I really don't care what you believe, Twist.

Now wait a sec,,just above,,you most certainly indeed claimed that you are indeed whining about identities and most certainly do care what I believe. Once again, you really don't know much, Frankie...

 You are coming apart, your posts aren't getting the attention they used to,

>Not by you

When directed toward myself, I will respond. That you take such actions as the odd act illustrates your communication deficits, Frankie,,,,if one wishes to correspond with another, they will address such accordingly,,this is what one does,,they direct a post to another.....and,,now pay special attention to this part, if one doesn't wish the attention of another, there is no reason for mentioning or directing a post toward their chosen internet name. I understand you need spoonfed, but many others may not, and that is cause for your great concern.

STOP using the matcher section until you understand what you are doing..........The reason for the "hash" disappearing is because you are shunting (shorting out) your radios output connector. When you do this the meter will fictitiously read 1:1 and the hash(atmospheric noise) will go away. You don't want this!

1.You want to set your radio on receive.
2.Set your matcher on match
3.Adjust your matcher until the hash comes back.
4.Then follow the procedures for matching in transmit.

You must always be able to establish a full scale calibration reading of your needle before you make any attempt to read the SWR meter.

Volatile? The truth is volatile? The fact that you don't understand anything about prepositions is volatile? Your inability to see the difference between KHz

So what happened to the rest of my sarcasm? What's the matter, Twist? It's not like I don't already know that you would have chopped it to bits and buried it in your favorite expressions, such as "communication deficit", "incompetence", "lid", etc. So maybe it's better that you didn't go there, cause I'm sure that anyone bored enough to read these posts is probably sick of the same old Twistedhedisms repeated in every one of your posts.

>,,others are more concerned with the integrity of a post,

It can have a great deal to do with the integrity of a post, or any other envelope which communicates a thought, idea, concept, argument, theory, etc; the only exceptions being absolute in nature (mathematics, deductive syllogisms, etc.). Your posts have been nothing but your "opinions" (and I quoted that because you said it yourself), and have never contained any absolutes. Therefore, -your- integrity becomes paramount; and everything you say, true or not, succumbs to the logical fallacy of 'inappropriate authority' (I won't bother with the Latin term because you are having such a hard time with English). In other words, after everything you have vomited here in the newsgroup over the years, your name might as well be Blarney Rubbish.

Go for it. At least Paine was sucessful in his writings, not like some self-proclaimed "professional journalists".

I would agree that "contempt" is an appropriate word for your current state of mind.

Then take it to email. I know you won't because you need validation from others in the newsgroup. That's fine too, since I just keep proving your ignorance with each and every post. Either way you lose.

Wrong. Most people know that when you enlist you don't sign up for 20 years. You serve only a few years (anywhere between 2 and 6, but usually 4), then you have the option to re-enlist. Even commissioned officers don't contract for the full 20 years, and many choose to leave before they retire. Since you didn't know these basic facts, information that most people consider to be common knowledge, then I would say there is a good possibility that you aren't even from this country. Maybe I was right when I joked about you washing up on shore...

I don't ride anyone's shirt tails, Twist, and certainly not the shirt tails of a dead man. As for "fire school", that might be the current term for ITS (Infantry Training School, where grunts learn to grunt), or maybe some fire-science MOS. Things change, and it's been almost 20 years since I got out, so maybe you can be more specific with what you refer to as "fire school" and maybe I can tell you what you are talking about.

Not a bad idea. And while I'm at it, I should make lists of all hams on the West side of the state that are ex-Marines, broadcast engineers, EWU graduates, subscribers of Supernews, legal CBers, or have names similar to Sparky. That should keep you well supplied with people you can "believe" me to be.

Wrong! Even after you accused me of being N8WWM I tried to stop those you were arguing with because it was making legal CBers look bad, them trolling along with such an idiot as yourself. But YOU just couldn't leave it alone and began making general legal threats against everyone in your delusional conspirasy. So don't start with that schoolyard "you started it" crap!

And I think code could go suck water from a camel's backside.

Those that want to use CW, have my blessing. Just don't force us to learn something we'll never use. They should make the test essay or fill-in-the-blank, rather then multiple-guess.

Imagine, a VE would actually have to grade a test, then compare answers.
Make them work for their "reimbursement".

Why don't we just give you a license and a callsign because you feel

Hey, Pal, I took my test. It was free at the VEC up the street. It came with a free HT donated by an ex-ham.

Total cost: 1 hour of time to be on the air. Took one week from thought to ticket.

Here's another kick in your seat, I only got 4 wrong and I DIDN'T study one bit.
Us technical types don't need study guides when we've been in radio since 1977.

I'm glad you passed your code test. Does that make you special?

"milksop single parent" is his new favorite. Twirted only knows a handful of words so he uses them over and over again. If you want to save yourself the trouble of reading his replies, just connect a few words from his standard vocabulary list together in a random fashion.....

communication deficit incompetent
self-esteem lid drunken junior fragile ego inadequacies impotence personal dilemma
mild retardation

Yes it does. You see I've also done the test thing. In front of the FCC. Theory and all. One shot....if failed...come back in another 30 days to try again.

There is no comparison to what I did to what you did. Again... the answer is YES.

Turn down the power, and the modulation goes up.

AM is a mixing process. 2 watts of audio mixed with a 4 watt carrier makes a 100% modulated signal. It will show as 6 watts on an RMS meter, and 16 watts peak on a peak reading meter.

http://www.cbtricks.com/~kd6tas/amsig.htm
will explain AM in more detail.

The above info jives with chapter 4 of The Complete RF Technician's Handbook, 2nd edition, by Cotter W. Sayre.

Find it at your library at 621.384.

Modulation from the radio has nothing to do with having an external amplifier.

26.330 is somebody's broadcast remote frequency. This stuff explains why you should stay above 40 and below 28 MHz:

CAP is 26.6200- the CAP main HF-AM Search and Rescue Frequency
The other two are 26.610 and 26.600. The 26 MHz band is used by broadcast remote transmitters in the 26.02-26.47 range, from 26.48 to 26.96 is used by the US Navy, USAF, CAP and many other US Government users.

CAP VHF-FM channels:

You don't strike me as the kind of fellow looking for a welcome. A newcomer looking for a welcome doesn't walk into a room full of guys with a great deal of experience and say, "Here's another kick in your seat, I only got 4 wrong and I DIDN'T study one bit. Us technical types don't need study guides when we've been in radio since 1977.I'm glad you passed your code test. Does that make you special?"

No it won't. You are forgetting that your sidebands cancel each other when reading RMS. It will read just the carrier; i.e, 4 watts. That's assuming, of course, you are running AM and not 'swang'.

> and 16 watts peak on a peak reading meter.

If you have the bucks to spend, and are so watt-crazy that you need to see that needle go swinging into the double digits, then go for it. Otherwise, it's much easier to read your carrier power with any old wattmeter and your modulation with any old modulation meter. As long as your carrier power remains steady and your modulation meter stays below 100%, you are doing fine, and are seeing more than a peak reading meter can tell you.

That's your own twisted interpretation of the facts, Twist. I never denied that I changed ISP's. But I have never been tossed, not by you or anyone else. I changed because of crappy service. My current ISP is mighty fine, but if they go CB radios are usually adjusted for optimum modulation from the factory. Pushing it any higher will just overmodulate your radio, splattering your voice across several channels, make you sound like crap, and won't improve your range by any significant margin (it might even reduce your range). If you want to be loud just buy an amp and join the keyclowns on channel 6. If you want to communicate, getting an SSB radio would be a great improvement in both range and clarity.

Forget all those mods and watts -- improve your antenna, get a good external speaker and a nice clean mic, and maybe a speech processor if you got the cash.

IF the FCC said by-by to 11m, and dropped some noise making crap, like industrial equipment that uses RF energy, on the band, and they can do that by legislation only. I'm not saying it will happen but that option exists.

If CBer's ever learned to work together like that I would highly suspect you wouldn't see the mess that you do. They would have worked together long ago to cleaned up the band. Once cleaned up the need for some of the proposed changes are no longer necessary.

5285. grounding plane question

I am getting a bad squeal when I key up the base, it's a Cobra 148NWST using a Pyramid 3 amp power supply. I was told by a local that I have hash on my modulation and the way to cure this is with a better grounding plane. He suggested I get something big and metal like a iron bed frame or car roof rack and bury it close to the house under the antenna. I already have one 8 foot rod in the ground for the A99. I checked connections and it's OK but the problem will not go away. Either it's not working or it's not able to make the grounding plane. My question is can I use aluminum wire to the bed frame or does it need to be copper and how far away can I run it. There is a sump pit about 50 ft from the house where I would like to locate it but am not sure if that's too far away. All answers are appreciated.

I noted your reply and thought i'd have a look inside the meter.
I discovered a broken solder joint to one of the tuner knobs. Hash is back.

Thanks to all who came to my rescue. I should have looked first before

Shane,
I can tell you that the problem is not with your antenna.
An 'A99' doesn't need a groundplane to work right. The ground is a 'safety' ground in case of lightning strikes and such.
The bit about using a bedspring or luggage rack as a ground is silly, it wouldn't do any better than laying out a few radials.
An all metal antenna doesn't work any better than one with a fibreglass shell like the 'A99', another old 'wive's tale'.

It's cheap. The meter probably works fine, but forget the matching unit. You would be better off with a $20 MFJ matcher (they ain't great, but they are better than nothing). Keep your load as small as possible -- i.e, switch the coil as small as you can, tune, then load for your antenna. Ya gotta do it several times to get the right combination. Take your time and do it right.

This "hash", what does it sound like? Does it sound like an AC buzz? If so, try running the radio on a battery to eliminate the power supply as the cause of the problem. A 3 amp power supply really is not big enough for a SSB radio...although it may work marginally. The PS could also have bad filter capacitors which would allow some remnants of the AC that pass through the rectifier to enter the radio, and cause a "buzz" in the audio.

The problem is not with antenna grounding.

  You, me, and a plethora of radio brethren interested in preserving Retroactive for nocodes.

With all the problems coming to light concerning VE's, there should be no such thing as a VE. There are many abuse issues concerning crooked VE's affecting their tested applicants that came to light last year and the problem is more widespread than originally thought. It is an ongoing issue.
The FCC makes you pay for your license, they ought hold testing sessions and administer such tests through sessions planned well in advance,,,.....volunteers of this or volunteers of that concerning aspects of hammie radio have a great swath of abuse,,the only volunteer aspect of hammie radio that doesn't add to their own problems are emergency volunteer operators. Give power via a radio volunteer, and the abuse is not far behind and as we all experience here, many deny or aren't even aware their behavior constitutes abuse...they want to dictate to others. Many of these unpartial observer volunteers have demonsrated their need for power right here in this forum...many volunteer for the feeling of power only, the rules be damned,,these ops want you to comply to THEIR ways and modes of operation and thinking and behavior,,,which is why they volunteer in the first place, to obtain the temporary feeling of power over another.....it sure isn't the upperclassmen, save for the oddball 2 or 3 once in awhile.....keep the code requirements as they are, at the very least. No one is forced to rise above nocode status. My call is the ITU won't drop it for the simple fact that the rest of the world isn't as technologically advanced as the US.....

I agree that the FCC should administer all hammie tests. Feeling special because you managed to pass a test in the same manner thousands of others did, is a good thing,,,but to use such an accomplishment as some sort of imagined measuring gauge to publically elevate yourself above another hammie is part of what plagues hammie radio today,,,,..divisive attitudes like yours toward others hammies hurts hammie radio, and shouting your imagined virtues is akin to saying "look at me..I'm better". No, you're not "better" because of your selected method by which you came to hammie radio, just different. To offer condescension to another because he came by his license in a differing manner than you illustrates your ego is heavly involved. You came to the right group.

Lelnad freebands..at times he must be content listening to what he's missing,,,it is why he made a post seeking a manner in which to circumvent and subvert his local rules and regulations and laws relating to a decent set of ears..he is a hypocrites hypocrite,,breaking rules and law when it isn'tt convenient to him, all the while false preaching to others the virtue of rules and laws.

His paranoia level, since he was found to be freebanding, now dictates he drive a distance from his squalor prior to keying. Gotta love the irony....

Not at all. Follow your first thread back and you will see where you took issue with my grammar use prior to Dick being mentioned. You attacked me unprovoked, with malice,profanity, and ignorance. I illustrated your lack of knowledge concerning your attack on my grammar use by educating you on English Grammar vs Latin where the rule you spoke of originated but does not translate to English, especially American-slang English (which, we use in America). This caused your overt concern and menstruation. The conversation concerning Dick came later, and yes, Dick most certainly did set forth his call in case we "work something really rare". Of course he said it, and we knew he said it tongue-in-cheek, nevertheless, it illustrates the grand supremacy of his wisdom, accuracy of his posts, and diplomacy,,..you exemplify the antithesis.

Once again, the folly is illustrated by your arrogance arrived through ignorance. The mere notion that you feel you were somehow given the Snipping posts to make them appear out of context is your forte. If you would exert self-control and not snip waht you can't handle, or better yet, ignore such posts, you wouldnt have such a problem comprehending the posts in their entirety in the manner which I presented each of them.

>Oh, really? Gee, I thought I was the one >showing all the times where YOU were wrong.

Yet, I remain not interested in changing your view..you ought try it sometime.

You claimed you THOUGHT you were showing me where I was wrong,,,,,as usual, you are incorrect. I stated that I'm not interested in changing any of your beliefs, as opposed to your obsession with what I believe and think. It was a polite way of saying you are responsible for your own reputation as a stained hammie lid and that you ought mind your own business.

>Did your brain ooze down into your nasal

Hello Shane:

The squeel problem can be a hand full of things, going wrong.

Its real hard to make a accurate suggestion to fix the squeal problem, not being there to track dirt onto your carpet, drink your Beer, and tell old war stories, know what I mean.

The squeel can be a bad SWR at the antenna, a bad coax, the mic gain turned up to high, a mic wired mic, a power supply not able to supply enough current, or even a broke radio.

Might want to check the antenna SWR, anything under 2 to 1 SWR ought to be ok. The bad connection at the PL-259 connectors, probably the shields not soldered. Some SWR meters have a built in Dummy Load, that acts as a perfect antenna, and can be substituted as the antenna. Worth a try.

The Mic gain can be to high and cause a squeel at times, suggest you turn down the mic gain, and try another mic.

The 3 amp power supply may not have enough current for the SSB Transmit Mode, might be close, but should be ok on AM, if the radio hasn't been modified for more power.

I have heard some CB Radios that have been modified some how for more power or modulation, that a squal has come from.

Hope this is of some help. Let us know how you make out there.

You think so? Stop thinking. I'll use any frequency I can. AM sucks, SSB is so much better. Now if only this nighttime skip would go away, the locals could communicate on it again, and wouldn't have to use 2 meters at night.

I don't have a communication deficit. There are plenty of people to talk to, ham & CB. Many do both. Some can be found to be limiting their options to one or the other. If you don't like what you hear, turn the knob. That works on TV as well as radio. Can't stand Springer, CLICK! Can't take Stern, CLICK!
Can't take a monotone ham, CLICK! Can't stand a foul-mouthed trucker, CLICK!
Too many off-frequency Mexicans on your sideband channel, CLICK! You have a choice.

(It's POURING DOWN RAIN, again! Shi+ won't stop for more then an hour at a time.
I bet field day is a washout this year like every hamfest so far...)

>of the other patients, alright?

The belief of one's identity is important to yourself. You continue to make it the issue,,,youhave your own mistaken belief system and have made your own untrue accusations of who I may be,,in addition to your lies you were forced to admit telling. You have zero credibility to hypocritically chastise another for the very same behavior you employ.

>So I shall, and I thank you for your

You live for it.

>Absolutely true. It is my life-long ambition.

We see that. Allowing myself to become the object of your actions outside this ng is not surprising, given your past demonstrations of ineptness.
>So what happened to the rest of my sarcasm?

You initiated snipping what you construe as unimportant and non-pertinent. I followed suit,,after all, you make the rules as you go.

>What's the matter, Twist?

Nothing at all Frank,,,,you;'re the one with blood in your panties making a fuss about your own rules.

Your assumptions have alwasy made you the target for ridicule. Somefollow the posts just to watch you squirm , Frankie. Others follow it to see my monkey dance while I play the pity tune on the worlds smallest violin (to reach the world's smallest mind).

>And until you actually claim to be someone

Frankie, frankie,,,no one is whining about identities except you.

Of course it's true, yet you are projecting your whining onto your teacher. Stop the projection, it is unhealthy.

Why? (chuckle) No one cares,,you need not explain "why" you project your inadequacies..really.

No Frankie,,you initiated the act, I merely followed suit. You scream hypocrisy without uttering a sound.

>Of course, it's not like such behavior isn't

Of course,,everyone is aware your reduced position in the world of radio,,,,a direct result of your predicatable behavior.

>And the only person with that problem is you,

How can I have a problem I'm not aware of? Hint for Frankie: I can't.

>Wrong, Twisty: You can because you are

Hmmm..I'm not the one admitting spending my free time on another in this group, Frankie,,you are.

The problem, as always illustrated and demonstrated by yourself, is all yours concerning what I believe. Clearly a demonsration of a battered ego that relies too heavily on others views instead of his own.

>So you can't handle the truth that you were Don't do drugs and don't drink, Frankie. One look at your liquid courage filed posts and it reminds me the damage it does.

>Twist (Tim doesn't count because he's the

Gee Frankie,,,,couldn't get through an entire post without resorting to making up terms as no other way to express yourself...it's called a communication deficit. Those who are unable to efffectively make their needs, wishes, wants, and opinions known, may resort to "inventing" new words or terms exclusive to others who suffer or share like maladies....an involuntary mechanism triggered as some sort therapeutic avoidance of self-ridicule.

>It's called 'symbolism', and is a basic part of LOL...you're beginning to get as angry as Lelnad,,he fancies himself a writer too, ya' know..he even posted a link (self-elevation to soothe the ego) to a website for something he wrote.

>You know what 'creative' means, don't you,

>Twist? I don't think you do when all you write

It's what is responsible for your degradation (shrug)..I didn't choose the topic,,,you brought it to my attention. Oh,,and what you "think" is irrelevant to those of us who know.

Something you obviously care a great deal of and attribute great

Attempting a Shakespearean approach when you can't differentiate simple

Not exactly. I claimed my belief of who you are is but that,,a mere belief.

Paramount? LOL..google that term in this room, Frankie.....you're really having difficulty expressing yourself in an original manner, Frankie......it's called a deficit in communication.

Do we need revisit Thomas
Paine's contributions to the US of A merely to illustrate your ignorance
in confusing integrity with identity and misusing the words as synonyms
and that others share this staggering example of paranoia?

>Go for it. At least Paine was sucessful in his >writings, not like some self-proclaimed

>"professional journalists".

It wasn't self-proclaimed. It was a direct answer to your inquiry, Lelnad claiming he was a writer and posting a link to his drivel is "self=professed",,,you claiming you were a marine (with no recollection of fire school) is "self-proclaimed".

Most of us are contempt in knowing who the liars are,, forced to admit

However, legal access to lower frequencies also nets you much more consistent DX if that is what you are into. Even the low end of 'freebanding' is highly subject to the need for good ionization of the F layer. Sporadic E occurs, but is seldom good for more than a thousand miles or so. One will need that license for, say, 20 meters. Access to higher frequencies will also net you much more consistent access for those 20 - 80 miles 'local' chews (as will access to even lower frequencies; 4 MHz and below)

Many don't want the use of a repeater or a hammie license. Over 100 countries barefoot on twenty seven MHZ,,,,how would a license make that "right"? It would still be illegal as per the poorly constructed DX rule. Oh, and DX IS done daily on cb, somewhere.

Other good comments above seconded.

What I do here, is use a small power supply as a charger for a Gell-Cell battery that provides my operating power. I have six radios and some other ancillary stuff operating this way, from a single 25AH gell cell. The biggest rig is 100W, but the Gell cell holds it up just fine, even on AM and FM

It's a lot less expensive than a power supply that will hold the load on it's own.
You just have to make sure that the power supply output is set right to float-charge the gell cell, and that it's output is higher than your idle drain, so it can catch up when you're not operating.

Nothing works inside. For me, radio means get out and rove. Jeep to a Hello! I would like to invite you to join the 11 Meter Amps group. It is a Yahoo group where you are welcome to discuss use of linear amplifiers on the 11 meter citizens band. Aside from useless debates about the legality of use and flaming others, all topics related to high power CB's are encouraged there. I hope for the group to be the premier resource of information, bringing minds together, sharing knowlege, helping each other. Hope to see you there!

try a switching power supply. they have plenty of good units that can do about 25 amps constant for around 99 bucks.

Is that where Sean and Bill are hiding? They couldn't handle technical topics here, so it wouldn't suprise me to see them run to another forum -- where Bill can be a "CB amp god" and Sean can talk about his 4000+ friends in the greater San Diego area. If they are there, feed their egos and keep them there, will ya? They don't have any place in the free and open discussion in rrcb.

I have a Palomar 300A. Got it 'used'..(real used..: P)
I changed out the diodes and the electrolytics..but there is no voltage (screen etc..) except about 11.5 AC on one of the pins to one tube, the driver tube (6LF6)..after that no voltage pass that. Plate voltage is about 680 volts. Electrolytics show about 690 volts DC out.
Resoldered all connections etc. Relays are good..(changed them..) Thinking maybe bad bypass caps?? Any help would be appreciated..Thanks..

It sounds hypocritical only if you read that one line. Put it in the context of my post and you would see that it is not -I- that inhibits open discussion, but rather those that attempt to dominate the technical side of the group with their half-educated concepts and credulous techno-voodoo. I have no problem with them returning to try and spread more of their mythology, but I don't think they will be very sucessful: If you read the technical discussions in here since they ran away, it's apparent that many here have learned to seperate technical fact from fiction. The dark-ages are over, the renaissance has begun, and the soothsayers and witch-doctors are forced to search for a more gullible audience.

I don't know who "they" are, I paid 75 for a used astron linear supply a couple years ago at a hamfest. Huge thing, 19" rackmount, gets hot.

Found a couple on ebay, around this price range.

Beware any cheap power supply. Hopefully you'll at least get what you paid

Maybe you should find some place to hide. Guess thats what happens when

Frank,
You're right, if you only read that one sentence your post does seem hypocritical. And you really should have left it at that. If you read the whole post, it is hypocritical and laughably stupid. The renaissance may have begun, but you are not a 'renaissance man' by any stretch of the imagination.
Saying that anyone can't take the technical discussions, or the 'free and open' discussions in 'r.r.cb.' is really 'pushing' the limits of gullibility! If you take a look at the posts for the last 3 to 6 months you will find that the majority are 'flames', there may be a half dozen technical questions, but I doubt it. It isn't the intimidation that causes people to leave, it's the B.S.

Doc when Sean, Eitner and Toll ran the group that was not technical discussion that was them giving crappy information about bird watts and swing and overvolting. They threatened anyone who dared question their amp god status and they pushed certain brands like xforce and davemade.
You should be glad there gone.

The semantic difference twixt "crowd" and "room full of guys" is one that, fortunately, escapes me.

i've been bagging those 11 meter freq's for years without hearing any u.s. gov activity. thats not to say they are there but ops from other countries who dont recognize the spectrum could give a rats ass...
only time i heard any gov traffic was when a few of us were on 27.500 and an air force c141 flying from maine to dover del cq'd around boston and he was +10 all the way to dover. nice to have a tall antenna platform ...

Amps are illegal with CB radio. Try posting on rec.radio.amateur.equipment or sci.electronics.repair

Ok..first off..
I found the contacts of the relay board that fit into the main chassis worn.
Used some deox cleaner on the main chassis contacts....
What I did was lay a thin 'solder strip' on the worn part of the contacts on the relay board. (I suppose you could also use a copper sheeting used in circuit boards and glue carefully also..)
Now amp is fully functional.

And Frank..I know they are illegal for CB..this is a 10 to 40 meter amp..
Unfortunatly, I can't find another amatuer that knows beans about radio or would help...can talk alot and chastise..thus why I am here..

Thanks to all for your input...73

Touche. And now you can no longer claim that I am unimportant to you as you don't snip my entire posts, or even just ignore them (except, of course, for the posts where I prove you wrong beyond your self-perceived ability to spin or backpeddle your way out of it). So that will be the rule from now on -- snip whatever is irrelevant. Ok then....

I anticipated such a response, which is why I included only two links that were old -- the other two are current. All four are directed at you, and so far you have responded to none of them, which makes your statement that "When directed toward myself, I will respond" just another entry in your long, long list of lies.

Yep, because it will push the abuse of the band to a threshold where the FCC will no longer be able to ignore it, and will finally pull their colletive heads out of their collective asses and do something about it. I'll admit it's not the best method of improving the band, but it seems inevitable at this point.

Typical Twistedhedism: Chop the sentence and attack each part out of context.

CB radios are adjusted for the best performace within legal limits. Modulation is adjusted for the best performance possible while not overmodulating, because modulation isn't subject to legal restrictions except when the radio is overmodulated, in which case it may make the radio illegal by causing RFI/splatter on adjacent channels.

AM modulation level has nothing to do with transmit range. If your carrier gets there, so does your audio. You can improve intelligibility by increasing your average modulation through compression, but that requires limiting to prevent overmodulation. And there is a limit to the amount of compression you can use (and therefore the level of average modulation) because the process of compression necessarily distorts your audio. Many radios have modulation limiters built into the radio; some work well, others don't. Most don't have any compression, so even if the limiter works well, increasing the modulation to where the limiter constantly clips the audio will just cause audio distortion on the other end.

And an adjustment to your output power isn't necessarily a good thing, either. Ideally, it takes four times as much output power just to double your range, so you will get no significant improvement by tweaking a couple extra watts from a stock CB radio (improving the antenna will provide greater gains than tweaking the power, gains that are realized in BOTH transmit AND receive). Also, tweaking for more power can put quite a strain on a radio that isn't designed for loads higher than legal limits -- every extra watt will require 3 watts of additional input power to the final (1 watt AM = 1.5 watts total, and assuming a 50% efficiency). If it doesn't distort the RF and/or audio due to inadequate power supply impedance and/or filtering, it will certainly shorten the life of the radio, the proof of which can be found in several large boxes in my shop filled with CB radios (hundreds) that were trashed because of people's ignorance on the subject. And it's not suprising to see that you are one of them, Twist.

As well as a fine of several thousand dollars if you get popped by the FCC for running an amp with a CB.

For Frank---- In case you need to be reminded of what Free and Open means.

Free = Voluntary, not fastened, independent ect.

Open = Free from controls, not secret or hidden, not shut or shut up ect.

One more definition needs to be pointed out at this time.....

Hypocrite = Feigning to be what one isn't

Which brings a question to mind.....Frank, are you in favor of free and open discussion in rrcb?

We told him to blink his light twice to west, when he was heading south and do it around the bridge.
I'll be damned if a P3 Orion comes by and he does that at the exact time while talking, pretty funny.

Absolutely, especially within the topic of the newsgroup. And with respect to your question I'll quote from another of my posts on the very same topic; from 4387fvgp6l55e7ttrh2khnog3e66ve44d9@4ax.com:

"I have no problem with them returning to try and spread more of their mythology, but I don't think they will be very sucessful:..."

Now I should probably provide YOU with a definition:

Bias = a mental leaning; pariality; prejudice; narrow-mindedness.

Now for MY question.....Tnom, do you prefer a newsgroup that is controlled by a few tech-wannabes that promote illegal operation and give bad technical advice to credulous people in order to boost their businesses?

If you understood it, what did he mean by "Saying that anyone can't take the technical discussions, or the 'free and open' discussions in 'r.r.cb.'..."? What does that mean... take the technical discussions where? or as what? Since you understood his post, maybe you can translate it, Shark.

let's see, you tried all these newsgroups...

alt.ham-radio.marketplace alt.ham-radio.morse alt.ham-radio.packet alt.ham-radio.vhf-uhf rec.ham-radio
rec.ham-radio.packet rec.ham-radio.swap

rec.radio.amateur.dx rec.radio.amateur.equipment rec.radio.amateur.homebrew rec.radio.amateur.misc rec.radio.amateur.policy rec.radio.amateur.space
rec.radio.amateur.swap

...plus there is QRZ, eHamnet, and dozens of other ham radio related forums. But I guess you tried all those and you couldn't find one ham who could help you troubleshoot a simple generic rf amplifier circuit.

uh huh, right

You shouldn't have 11V on the filaments of a 6V tube.

hey Josh maybe you got chastisement by other hams because using a Palomar on ham bands is not a good idea, they are cheaply made cb amps meaning they have poor or no harmonic filtering so you will splatter out of band etc. also if you are the same joshua I think you depend on frank for help too much I see he helped you fix your swan once.

Thanks for the reply..tryed that..smoked a 10k resistor following the diagram..whatever he did, it's throughly messed up. Nothing is where it's supposed to be. Some funky mods in the audio section. He even rewired the Jones plug to the power supply for some reason. Got that working but no go with the rig. I don't know what he was trying to do but it will have to have a Swan tech to do it (if you can find one..) Cost more to fix in money
and heartburn than it's worth. Want to mess up a perfectly fine radio, let a ham
do some mods to it..Torks me..Landfill time...tired of messing with it..Thanks for the response..

Frank..
I think it is my business where I post for help.
Most amatuer linears will work on 11 meters..that is a moot question.
Perhaps you should concern yourself with your own affairs if you are not willing to offer help.

I have no problem with helping anyone fix any ham equipment I am familiar with, just not here because this is a CB newsgroup. And as some other poster pointed

Are you referring to the use in "Oz"?

Here in the UK, it is (at present) part of our CB service (27.60125 - 27.99125MHz). However, they are removing that band from CB use by 2010. We will then have just the 40 CEPT frequencies (26.965 - 27.405MHz).

Yes, you -are- missing something. This is a newsgroup for CB radio, not ham equipment repair. There are other newsgroups for that. So why are -you- here?

>Let me restate..it's none of your business where I post..

So why is it such a concern to you how I reply?

It's none of your business what I do with my time. Gee, that sounds familiar...

>If you are a ham..what is it you want?...

Nope, not a ham. I just fix their equipment from time to time, usually when they can't find the problem themselves.

Maybe. So, if you are not a ham, are you a CBer?

You have a overdose of bias. You are biased into feeling the need to control this newsgroup. Try being a little more "free and open".

If it's free and open anyone can post. If they promote silly ideas then they'll be shot down. You seem to forget two things.

1 Your not a cop
2. Even if you were a cop a discussion of amps is not illegal.

Do you mean that I should be more accepting of discussions about illegal

So you're saying that it's ok to shoot down someone with a silly idea, but not ok to shoot down someone who encourages the violation of federal laws or the trashing of the Citizen's Band?

You, not I, said...

"Saying that anyone can't take the technical discussions, or the 'free and open' discussions in 'r.r.cb.' is really 'pushing' the limits of gullibility!"

...which isn't even a complete sentence. Look at the phrase "anyone can't take the technical discussions". Take them where? Take them how? Even better, how does one 'take' or 'not take' a discussion?

What >I< wrote was that Toll and Eitner had no place in "free and open discussion in rrcb". That's the way I see it. If you have a problem with that, at least take the time to phrase your complaint in the form of a complete sentence so I can understand what you are trying to say. And who knows, I might just agree with you.

Hi Jos,
You have been introduced to one of our resident rec.radio.cb trolls.

"Trolls may participate in the ensuing argument, or they may simply write "Drive-by Postings".
That is to say, they will ignite the flame war and then sit back and watch the show.

Cagey net users quickly recognize trolls for what they are and warn their fellow posters that
"You are being trolled" (or words to that effect). However, since there is a constant influx of new users on the net, trolls are going to be able to entertain themselves for a long time to come.

Trolls crave attention, and they care not whether it is positive or negative. They see the Internet as a mirror into which they can gaze in narcissistic rapture.

An Internet "troll" is a person who delights in sowing discord on the Internet. He (and it is usually he) tries to start arguments and upset people. Trolls see Internet communications services as convenient venues for their bizarre game. For some reason, they don't "get" that
of digital abstraction. As a result, they feel no sorrow whatsoever for the pain they inflict.

Indeed, the greater the suffering they cause, the greater their 'achievement' (as they see it).

Trolls are utterly impervious to criticism (constructive or otherwise). You cannot negotiate with them; you cannot cause them to feel shame or compassion; you cannot reason with them. They cannot be made to feel remorse. For some reason, trolls do not feel they are bound by the rules of courtesy or social responsibility.

Perhaps this sounds inconceivable. You may think, "Surely there is something I can write that will change them." But a true troll can not be changed by mere words.

If you want a deeper analysis than that, perhaps a psychologist can shed some additional light on the matter.

DO NOT FEED THE TROLLS!"

The 8' rod should be more than ample for grounding. I can't figure how a lawn mower chassis or bed frame would be a better ground plane than Mother Earth. Try watering the grass around your pole if it gets too dry.

Frank,
A 'free and open discussion' is only possible when all concerned are willing to participate. That isn't very likely in this NG, too many would rather 'flame' than discuss, or just like to argue.
As for technical discussions, there just aren't that many people here that know what they are talking about. Those that do know, seldom stick around because they don't care to put up with all the CB 'pseudo-science' garbage that they're subjected to along with the 'flames', name calling, and all the rest of the 'normal' things that go on here.
'Doc

PS - If there's something you don't understand in the above,
I'm sure someone will be willing to explain it to you.

Peter, in uk.rec.radio.cb you post criticism of this group saying it is a mess and its so much nicer in the uk group so I assume you are in here slumming or trolling for yanks, which is it?

I don't own a 11 meter amp, but I'll be damned if you think you can tell me not to post about them being illegal.

Whether you like it or not comments about amps being illegal on cb are legal comments. Even if they are sarcastic. Even if they are rude. Comments about "CB rules" are protected by free speech. They cannot be banned like you are trying to do in the yahoo amps group or the cb tricks group.

I dont see how Frank was attempting to muzzle them. If you mean he was posting that amps are illegal, then that is just telling the truth, not muzzling. You guys just dont want to hear the truth. You want to have amp discussions without any one bringing up the legality of using them on CB, and that isnt gonna happen here.

Actually, the 300A will meet todays spurious emissions ratings.

It was, and still is, a good amateur amplifier that takes either 25 watts, or 100+ watts of drive.

So, seems you don't know exactly what you talk about, either. And the 300A is far from a basic, generic CB type amp... They where also not cheap in their days.

His problem is he doesn't have enough amperage to power an SSB radio.

Get a 7 amp power supply and your problems should dimish, if not disappear.

No it won't. Not unless it's heavily modified and used with a big filter. You

It's a TV sweep tube amp, designed and built for people that couldn't afford an amp with a tube properly designed for power RF. We've been through this before, Toll, do you want to go there again?

Cheaper (in both price and quality) than any legitimate amps.

Hey Shark, THIS guy is trying to prevent ME from posting! Doesn't that rank somewhere on your list of newsgroup no-no's?

WHAT? No long-winded speech about proper newsgroup behavior? No repetitive whining about how you can't keep him in your killfile? No sarcastic remarks about how he wants to prevent others from posting? No accusations that he's trolling? No sermon about his using profanity? Well God Damn, Shark, you are one BIG FUCKING HYPOCRITE!!!

I'm not one of the ones who knows what he is talking about, and left because of all the flames and name calling.

I'm coming back to CB after a 25 year absence and have my son interested as well. I came to the group in the hopes of finding technical discussion from which he & I could benefit.

Compared to the flames, and name calling, and long involved attempts at one-upmanship; the amount of technical discussion has been pretty small.

I'm new here so it is not my place to criticize. I just want to express my disappointment that a newsgroup which I hoped would be about CB radio, turns out not to be.

Shame really as it could be a valuable resource.

Earl what kind of technical discussion are you looking for? cb radio was intended as a nontechnical service for the average citizen. if you want a service that was intended to be a valuable technical resource for the radio hobby, try ham radio.

Oh God, Chuck's out on leave from the funny farm.
Here Chuck, maybe this will help you see things different:

That is to say, they will ignite the flame war and then sit back and watch the show.

Cagey net users quickly recognize trolls for what they are and warn their fellow posters that
"You are being trolled" (or words to that effect). However, since there is a constant influx of new users on the net, trolls are going to be able to entertain themselves for a long time to come.

Trolls crave attention, and they care not whether it is positive or negative. They see the Internet as a mirror into which they can gaze in narcissistic rapture.

An Internet "troll" is a person who delights in sowing discord on the Internet. He (and it is usually he) tries to start arguments and upset people. Trolls see Internet communications services as convenient venues for their bizarre game. For some reason, they don't "get" that they are hurting real people. To them, other Internet users are not quite human but are a kind of digital abstraction. As a result, they feel no sorrow whatsoever for the pain they inflict.

Indeed, the greater the suffering they cause, the greater their 'achievement' (as they see it).

Trolls are utterly impervious to criticism (constructive or otherwise). You cannot negotiate with them; you cannot cause them to feel shame or compassion; you cannot reason with them. They cannot be made to feel remorse. For some reason, trolls do not feel they are bound by the rules of courtesy or social responsibility.

Perhaps this sounds inconceivable. You may think, "Surely there is something I can write that will change them." But a true troll can not be changed by mere words.

If you want a deeper analysis than that, perhaps a psychologist can shed some additional light on the matter.

DO NOT FEED THE TROLL!

What is a troll?
The term "troll" can mean a number of different things, but in essence, a troll is a person who aims to have 'pleasure' at your expense. There are two main types of trolls:

1.. people who are psychologically disturbed, and seek to feel good by making other list members feel bad. This is a sort of "psycho troll", whose deception involves deceiving themselves as well as others. In this respect, they are no different to the sorts of people we meet in everyday life who are disturbed - some of them are easy to spot, and others aren't.
Such people may even use their real names on the internet, and they may not even realize that they are "trolling" because it is all subconscious.
2.. people who pretend to be someone that they are not - they create personae that you think
are real, but they know is fictitious.
Trolling can be played at various levels...."

Fishing was good thank you. Caught six Rainbow

14". My daughter reeled in one of the 14" (she's only four, she was thrilled)

Why should I limit my topics in "free and open discussion"?

It used to be, many years ago before it was overrun by freebanders and amp-junkies. Since then it has been a madhouse. Stick around a little while, maybe it will take a turn for the better.

That's awfully small minded of you. If someone new needs to know something, or if anyone wishes to discuss CB, then that's what this group is for. CB is not all plug and play, stupid.

Thank you. I was just trying to be polite and respectful of the than produce a series of " Who the hell do you think you are?? coming would be great if it did. I don't run a power amplifier and my old AM only Realistic Navaho base is not ideally suited to freebanding.

That being said, I would enjoy and benefit from discussions of either subject. Hopefully those discussions would deal with issues rather than "So and so is a worthless human being for using an amp in his mobile" or "So and so is surely a homosexual because he doesn't approve of freebanding".

Got a few on the shelf, and use one of them regularly. The only real problem those radios ever had was that a crystal or two would drift after several years.
Fortunately, used rigs are cheap and you can usually find a good crystal if you look around a bit.

That kind of stuff is going to happen regardless, just like it does on the radio. I recommend using your browser's filter and/or killfile.

I do appreciate all the help you all have suggested. All taken in, I just am now asking if anyone has the book #55 of the Samms series as it has all the mods for the Pace 123A in it as my brother noted. If you can scan that section and send to me I can pay you(in reference to the modulation)As I have found out, in some radios, modulation tuning up a little bit can help so much with a good antenna....thanks again for all of your help!

All Im asking is exactly what it was he wanted here. He said technical discussion from which he and his son could benefit. That could be anything from which wire is + and - on a kraco to an explanation of F

RADIO LAW: HAMS PETITION TO OUTLAW HI-FI SSB

On-air experimentation with so-called High Fidelity or Enhanced Single Sideband transmissions could be outlawed if thr FCC adopts a proposed rules change requested by two radio amateurs on opposite sides of the country. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Paul Courson, WA3VJB, reports from the nations capital:

A petition for rulemaking was sent to the FCC and accepted by the agency May 27th. It was not immediately issued a Rulemaking Number so it was hard to find in the public record. However, Newsline has talked with two sources who have seen the proposal, and it calls for what many would consider severe bandwidth limitations on HF phone.

The petition asks for a federally mandated bandwidth limit of 2.8 kilohertz for SSB, well below the extended bandwidth needed for what has been called enhanced audio.

One of the two hams who submitted the petition told the FCC they are motivated by interference problems caused by two groups of single sideband operators. These groups are portrayed by the petitioners as, in both cases, having cast aside traditional voluntary limits on bandwidth of roughly three kilohertz. The petition therefore asks that these voluntary limits be made mandatory to provide a clear enforcement mechanism for regulators.

The petitioners, Michael Lonneke WØYR of Virginia, and Melvin Ladisky W6FDR of California, said hams from one of the groups come on during radio contests, and are found tweaking their transmitters to splatter purposely to provide elbowroom on a very crowded band. The two men characterize the other group as those who experiment with high-fidelity audio, apparently trying to replicate the sound of FM Broadcast stations.

Newsline has recently reported on advisory letters sent out by FCC Enforcement Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, who wrote to several members of the enhanced SSB group telling them the agency had received interference complaints. The letters did not validate nor dispute the complaints, but warned the stations that if such complaints continued, the unresolved friction could trigger petitions for rulemaking. One such petition is now at hand.

A Newsline reporter spoke with Lonneke, who declined to provide a copy of his petition for this report. He said he and Ladisky hold the same views on the matter of excessive bandwidth causing interference, and that they teamed up on the petition to add strength to their call for regulatory intervention. Lonneke declined further comment, and said the petition will speak for itself if the FCC chooses to assign it a rulemaking number and put it to public comment.

Members of the enhanced SSB group have told Newsline they believe their experimentation with improved audio is totally in line with the spirit of ham radio, and thet when conducted under appropriate conditions, is every bit as justified in bandwidth consumption as any other spectrum-intensive activity, including contesting. But the FCC's Hollingsworth, reacting to such comments, disagreed, suggesting the mode of SSB was commissioned for the amateur service as a spectrum conservation mode, counter to the idea of high-fidelity audio and the bandwidth it requires.

Hollingsworth could not be reached to comment on the proposed Petition, and another FCC official declined to comment.

The petition also mentions the legacy mode of AM, and said it, quote, does not create the same problems that the burgeoning use of so-called 'Hi-Fi Single Sideband' creates. Nonetheless, the petition asks the FCC to impose a 5.6 kilohertz bandwith limitation on AM, with the restrictions asked for on all HF allocations below 28.8 megahertz.

Previous regulatory proposals based on bandwidth have failed, including Docket 20777 from the mid 1970s. The conclusion then was that having loosely-defined technical standards allowed the greatest range of experimentation in ham radio, as long as such signals are clean. Indeed, many present-day violations of splatter, overdriven amplifiers, and poorly administered audio lashups can already trigger enforcement action under existing FCC rules governing the purity of signal.

Reporting for Newsline, Paul Courson, WA3VJB, in Washington

As we go to air, the ten page petition by W0YR and W6FDR has not been been assigned a Rule Making number designation. More on this story in future amateur Radio Newsline reports. (ARNewsline™, W5YI)

ON THE AIR: PERTH HAMS JAMMED OFF 2.4 GHZ

A cloud of radio frequency interference has settled in on the 2 point 4 Gigahertz in the city of Perth Australia. For many hams it is making satellite operations impossible. Felix Scerri, VK4FUQ, reports from the city of Ingham – down under:

You may not hear many VK6 hams on AO40 for a while. Many are suffering from interference from some form of wide band data transmission centred on 2.4GHz. The signal covers much of the Perth metro area and is very strong. So strong in fact that it does not matter where you beam you can still hear it - mainly from reflections.

The signal, which runs continuously, sounds like a 100Hz buzzing sound and has a bandwidth of about MHz. Looking at the signal on a spectrum analyzer it has a flat top and very steep sides. The signal started about 6 weeks ago and one suggestion is that it might be an image response of S band down converters to the 2.1GHz G3 mobile phone service that have just started tests.

At airtime, the interference is still there and hams in Perth are wondering what to do to make the problem, go away. (Q-News)

WRC 2003: AN UPDATE

Radio regulators from around the world are still gathered in Geneva Switzerland trying to work out numerous spectrum issues including some dealing with Amateur Radio. Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB, is here with the latest:

The International Telecommunication Union's 2003 World Radiocommunication Conference got under way June 9th in Geneva Switzerland. Amateur Radio is only a small part of the conference which is trying to complete work on more than 40 agenda items.

Amateur Radio is but a small part of the conference, which is trying to complete work on more than 40 agenda items. Three are especially important to us: realignment of 7 MHz allocations (agenda item 1.23), revision of the regulations governing the amateur and amateur-satellite services (agenda item 1.7), and consideration of an allocation for satellite-borne synthetic aperture radars (SARs) in the 70-cm band (agenda item 1.38).

Two other agenda items that could potentially have a great impact are the drafting of an agenda for the next WRC scheduled for 2007 (agenda item 7.2) and the revision of footnotes to the Table of Frequency Allocations (agenda item 1.1). A member of the IARU core team has been assigned to follow each of these five items, with the most focus being on 7 MHz.

It is the intention of the IARU core team to send timely and accurate reports of final decisions reached on Amateur Radio issues. It is important to remember that nothing is final until the second reading of a document in the Plenary, which in the case of controversial issues will not take place until the final week of the conference, 30 June to 4 July.

IN THE MEDIA: HAM RADIO HIGHLIGHTED ON WBUR RADIO

Ham radio was the featured guest when WBUR radio in Boston Massachusettes devoted its show titled "The Connection" to the hobby on Thursday, June 12th. Hosted by Dick Gordon, the show's theme was that ham radio is alive and vital with close to two-and-a-half million hams world wide still consider ham radio their preferred way to fly.

The program was also centered around the new book titled "Hello World: A Life in Ham Radio" by Danny Gregory and Paul Sahre. A book based on the collection of QSL cards of silent key W2OJW. And while neither of the authors was there, Bob Hopkins, WB2UDC was. Hoskins is Director of the Computer Center at Cooper Union University in New York and played a key role in the books development:

Hopkins: "Hello World is a wonderful book, and where I work over at Cooper Union I have collegues that do many things. We have an engineering school, an art school and an arcetecture school. Because of the archecture aspect, a collegue of mine who works at the Princeton Archecture Press as well as Cooper Union contacted me and said that he had a couple of friends who were thinking of putting together a book on ham radio post cards and wanted to do the graphic design and would I be interested in having a conversation with them. I said -- oh sure -- fine -- bring them in. These guys came in with these fabulous cards dating back to 1927 up to the present."

Also appearing on the program were were Moody Law, WQ6I in Claremont California, Joe Leto, W0ANT from Ankeny Iowa, and Harry Han, BG4AGY, in Shanghai. Each spoke on the way ham radio has affected their personal lives and those around them.

Even though its well over a week since the perogram aired, it is archived as a Real Audio stream at the WBUR website. To hear it take your web browser to http://www.theconnection.org/shows/2003/06/20030612_b_main.asp

RADIO LAW: NY HAM CITED UNDER STATE SCANNER LAW

A New York ham has been cited for having radio gear in his car even though the state law governing scanner radios exempts licensed Amateur Radio operators. On May 31st Richard C. Lalone II, KC5GAX, of Calcium, says that he was stopped while driving well under the posted speed limit by a New York State Trooper and given a ticket for having Icom IC 1500 and IC 706 radios in his vehicle.

Lalone says via the qrz.com website that he did try to explain that that he was an Amateur Radio Operator and even provided his Amateur license for the officer’s review. Apparently, this was not good enough and the ticket was issued.

Lalone appeared in court on June 10th to answer the summons. At that time he approached the judge with both his license and a copy of New York Traffic Law 397 a copy of PR Docket 91-36. But the Court Recorder immediately took the documentation from the judge and returned it to KC5GAX. The judge then conferred with the Court Recorder after which he told Lalone that he was entering a plea of innocent for him. He then instructed Lalone to seek an attorney and be present in court July 9th. They court then offered KC5GAX paperwork to obtain a public defender, and returned the citation with the new court date.

Its not clear as to what will transpire on July 9th. Lalone’s posting did not state if this was a trial date or other type of preliminary hearing. If he is convicted of violating New York’s scanner control law Lalone faces a fine of $1000, 6 months in jail, or both. (W6EM, qrz.com)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC WRITES PART 15 DEVICE USERS ABOUT ALLEGED INTERFERENCE TO AMATEUR RADIO

Turning to enforcement issues, the FCC has written two Northern Virginia residents to follow up on complaints from a local amateur. A ham who alleges that he's on the receiving end of harmful interference from telephone devices with the capability to support multiple cordless remotes. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has more:

According to the ARRL Letter both units interfereing with Bernie Keiser, W4SW, of Vienna, Virginia, are unlicensed Part 15 consumer electronics made by a well-known manufacturer. In separate June 2nd letters to the two users, the FCC’s Sharon Bowers pointed out that if their units are the cause of harmful interference to a licensed spectrum user, they are responsible for solving the problem. Also, that the operator of the device is responsible for correcting the interference or ceasing operation whenever such interference occurs.

Bowers is the deputy chief of the Consumer Inquiries and Complaint Division of the FCC's Consumer and Governmental Affairs Bureau. She explained in her letters that the equipment was classified as an intentional radiator and noted that harmful interference to a licensed radio service from such a device is a violation of FCC rules. She advised the consumers that the alleged harmful interference must be corrected before they may use the devices legally. She suggested they contact the manufacturer or retailer of the equipment to see if they'd either allow them to return them or exchange them for devices that don't cause interference.

The interference to W4SW’s ham radio operation took the form of broadband noise from 2400 to 2450 Mhz. This made it it difficult for him to hear the AO-40 downlink and beacon in the 2.4 Ghz band.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF.

The complaints against the two Vienna Virginia consumers represent a bit of a turnabout from the typical interference scenario. Usually its the ham who generates complaints of RFI to consumer electronic gear and hears from the FCC. (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT: HAM ACCUSED OF FALSE DISTRESS CALLS ORDERED OFF THE AIR

A California ham has lost his right to operate an Amateur Radio station. This, based on allegations by the FCC that he may have been the source of a number of phony distress calls made by radio.

On June 3rd the agency’s Riley Hollingsworth notified Michael V. Swift, the now former KG6QOB to inform him that his license had been cancelled. This, based on evidence that the San Ramon ham had made numerous false distress calls on Marine Channels 16 and 22A.

In his letter Hollingsworth said that in view of the agency’s action that Swift no longer has authority to operate Amateur Radio transmitting equipment. He also warned that any continued on-air operation by Swift could lead to a fine or criminal prosecution. (FCC, RAIN)

SPECTRUM REALLOCATION: FCC PROPOSES UNLICENSED DEVICES IN THE 5 GHZ BAND

Still with regulatory matters, the FCC has proposed making 5.47 to 5.725 Gigahertz available to National Information Infrastructure devices, including Radio Local Area Networks, on an unlicensed basis. If adopted, this plan will increase the spectrum available to license-free devices in the 5 GHz region by nearly 80%.

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: THE TRUE UNIVERSAL REMOTE

A true universal remote unit that will literally help to control your entire lifestyle is now under development. Researchers on the project say that the all-in-one controller that would choreograph not just home entertainment systems but also intelligent appliances all around the house.

Maya Designs Inc. in cooperation with Pennsylvania’s Carnegie Mellon University has created a prototype based on a Compaq iPAQ portable digital assistant. The experimental handheld has so far been used to control two lamps, a fan and a stereo with a five-CD changer. Researchers say that more is on the way once standardization of remote control codes for various appliances is achieved.

The Consumer Electronics Association is working on this aspect of the problem. It estimates the average household has at least four remote control units. It also understand why the consumer electronics industry considers a universal remote an important device for the marketplace. (Science Today)

INTERNATIONAL - EUROPE: PMR446 MEANS FUN

From a listener in Europe comes word of a new communications network called PMR446. This is a licence free 500 milliwatt personal mobile radio service that is quite similar to the United States Family Radio Service with one big difference. The pan-Eueropean service permits is users to connect their radio gear to the Internet using personal computers and software interfaces. The software of choice is eQSO and with it Eueropean experimenters have created a network of linked rf-gateways.

On the R-F side, the radio gear is limited to flea power and built-in antennas, but thanks to gateway linking PMR 446 is quickly developing into quite a hobby thats bringinging together hams and non hams alike. In fact, it even has its own home in cyberspace at www.446user.co.uk. Drop by and have a look at what’s happening on the other side of the Atlantic. (PMR446 Users Group)

INTERNATIONAL - HOLLAND: RADIO NETHERLANDS TARGETED BY PUBLIC BROADCASTER

Radio Netherlands management have reacted angrily to a recent edition of the Dutch domestic current affairs TV programme Nova. A story reported on Nova said that drastic budget cuts of up to 85% was in the offering for Radio Netherlands, and as a result everything except broadcasts to the Netherlands Antilles and Surinam would be scrapped.

According to Radio Netherlands, the erroneous item was based on a leaked copy of a report into the efficiency of public broadcasting that was jointly commissioned by the Dutch Ministry of Culture and the broadcasters themselves. Nova seized on one section of the report and interviewed a representative of the Dutch Association of Journalists, who said this would effectively mean the end of Radio Netherlands.

But Radio Netherlands says that the report was not a call to action. Rather, its purpose of the report was to identify multiple scenarios where cost savings could be made. The example quoted by Nova was just one. The Hilversum based station also noted that decisions on the mission of Radio Netherlands are made by politicians in The Hague, not by other public broadcasters or the authors of a commissioned report. THAT FINAL ITEM: N6ZE’S CROSS-COUNTRY ROVING ODYSSEY

And finally this week, the story of Peter Heins, N6ZE, who may now hold the record for a QRP Rover in the June ARRL VHF QSO Party. In less than two days, Pete managed to rove coast-to-coast, from Grid Square FN-20 to CN-87. Thats a distance of 2754 miles and he operated 6 and 2 meter SSB from each location. Here’s how he did it.

From 1400 to 14:45 E-D-T on Saturday June 14th, Pete was on the air from park bench overlooking Hudson River at Weehawken New Jersey. From there he even managed to work a station in grid EL-86 thru the tremendous E skip that was present at the time.

A bit more operating from a hotel room in midtown Manhattan followed until 15:30 Eastern Daylight Time. Then a quick drive out to the airport where Pete, who is a commercial airline pilot, traded his ham radio microphone and key for the co-pilots seat of a Boeing jetliner. He then spent the next several hours flying to Salt Lake City Utah.

During the layover, Pete rented a car, unpacked his FT-690 and IC-202 and took to the airwaves. From 8:45 to 15:30 Mountain Daylight Time hN-6-Zed-E roved through Grids DN30, 31, 40 and 41 operating both 6 and 2 meters.

He then repacked the gear, got back in the plane and flew it another 689 miles on to Seattle. Thanks to another hours time change, Pete was back on the air around 19:52 Pacific Daylight Time in Grid CN-87 from the airport ramp making two QSO’s. His last contact took place at 19:59 Pacific Daylight Tine. That was just 1 minute before end of contest.

His totals for the contest period: On 6 meters he had 16 QSO’s, 16 QSO points and 8 multipliers. 2 meters yielded 24 QSO’s, 24 QSO points and 9 multipliers for a grand total of 960 points.

In his posting to the VHF Reflector, Pete put out a special thank you to the hams in the Salt Lake City area who provided lots of information for operating sites in 4 grids that helped to make his cross country VHF roving odyssey, complete. (ARNewsline™, N6ZE)

Going through my collection of old raqio gear and magazines I picked up at a garage sale, I found several old Ameco amateur radio study manuals. These were MUCH thinner than what we see today, causing the prospective ham to do much more studying and research to learn the hobby. It was quite interesting to sit down and go through them, and they didn't have the question pool at the end.

frank you have been on here for what is it now? three freekin years and some change....?? i mean give it a break......your point has been noted for crying out loud..........amps have been on cb almost since its inception......do you think you are going to change that???? nope....so you do the only thing you can about it and that is get on the internet and whine about it.........since you obviously have been put on hold by some kid down the street.......well boo hoo hoo.......too bad.........frank you are not going to stop us from talking about amps, or using amps or buying amps or anything else..........kc's rule frank.........get over it.................

I was up at Calaveras Big Tree's for the day, visiting friends that were camping with their kids.
Most of the small one's swallowed the hook,
one of the big one's we kept just so my daughter could say she caught one. He had a smoker, so he was going to smoke them , then eat some & give away the rest.

Hey GW, in your opinion, what's he here for then? To answer Frank's question, he must have missed my response to Chuck:

Um, Chuck, it's Frank Gilliand and he's done nothing wrong other than to troll, so his ISP couldn't care less.

It's not Sideband, it's taunt towards me. He is trying to use your post as flame bait towards me, don't worry about it, consider it's source.

Sorry to say SSB, You as well as the others have fallen victim to a hoax, that is not me who replied to you. The person has even told you guys that but you have it stuck in your mind that it is me. I can't understand why you guys think I would go to the trouble of making up accounts from other servers. I post what I want from this account, and I always have, but the paranoid ones think otherwise and no matter what I say it can't change that. The only thing I change is nics but then again they all come from this account, guys are damn paranoid. I mean it used to be aaron that got blamed for everything, well what happened to him? And doug, and lelnad etc, you guys don't think they are still around do you?

Nope their not George, you are the only one that's crying about it, you are the one with an AOL account. As you said about me, I sent out one e mail to friends explaining "those" posts, that's it. I'm not going to sit here and debate it with a troll like you, it doesn't matter.
You on the other hand have been busted using the AOL account to troll this group among others, your response is "I'm being set up", whatever you want to say OJ or is Scott Peterson?
It really doesn't matter, your a troll and nothing else.

I have a Redwood Deck to finish staining, feel free to pound away at the keyboard for no response,

Neither... just stating a fact, many other people also say the same.
And, this is NOT an American group... there is no USA in "rec.radio.cb", just as there is no "gay", "faggot", etc. There is, however, a "CB" in it... and that is what my post was about.

I realise that you would rather that all the genuine users of this group vacate... that is clearly your ultimate goal.
If us geniune users did vacate, all that would be left are you Trolls... and you would then leave the group in search of another to destroy.
You are even trying to destroy certain Google groups.

No one ever said set up you dick with ears it was a strategic hoax. It was decided by the akc that Geo was doing such a good job all alone that they would clone him so they did. Sometimes the clone operates for days at a time without geo even being on the ng. They knew the paranoid ones would take the bait and accept the clone as the real thing. The evidence is staring you in the face and you guys can't see it even if he had an aol account if you trace these posts there is no way they can be from him.

Really assclown? I am still waiting for proof. Are you gonna post that one from the FRS group? And your proof that it is me is what?
That it says wa3moj? LOL I told you before i am not wa3moj LOL so who ever made that post you need to ask them. The posts you made were you there is no question about it, just the same as I busted you as frenchy, and a few other name. In fact 3 or 4 years of NG post to TS groups then you make a post minutes later to the rec.radio.cb... Please explain again, I forgot your lie.

Hey Frankie; how about operating and not worrying about what other

>I think the adminstrator of this newsgroup, should shut down rec.radio.cb.

Why? Too many posts in here, are not even CB related.

Ham operator(s) boasting about some ham meet taking place on 6 meters. Or others making references to 75 meters.

Which is totally irrelevant.

Someone posts a message that involves a linear or radio with extra channels or someone wanting to get their radio tuned up or even swap.

Some sniffling ass ham operator will just go ballistic and do nothing but whine and complain about it.

Like get a life!

And you claim to be a Ham operator, that's a understatement don't you think.. since your acting pre-maturely, more like a four year old kid
- jumping up and down because you didn't your way. ;(

And other ham operators complain about others using his or her name, ID. Carry on about name calling, who is using what server or web site to post here. Running IP traces, Pointing out faults of others in regards to failing to correctly spell words and not using spell check, or using caps.. because someone says its called YELLING!

That had to be a stupid ham operator to come up with that.

WHO CARES, ITS STILL TEXT. YOU CAN READ IT, IF YOUR GETTING UPSET ABOUT IT, YOU REALLY NEED TO GET A LIFE. OOPS, WAS MY CAPS LOCK ON?
OH WELL I AM LAUGHING AT YOU, BECAUSE YOUR GETTING ALL BENT OUT OF SHAPE. LOL.

Like a bunch of old ladies hanging out over the picket fence, wondering who they can talk about next.

life was so much simpler without the internet. Back then all you heard was someone complaining about this or that. It lasted a whole five seconds and was forgotten about.

I stop by now and then to read the messages and off the wall topics.
And have a good laugh or two. Its funny!!

>My apologies to all fellow CB'rs that have to suffer after I posted this.
>The urge was there, I had to do it. :)

and.. I know, as soon as this is posted. It's like a bug lite, it will draw whoever in like a magnet. It will make whoever want to leave something for others to read. And whoever? Will try really hard to make everyone think, they have something worthy to say. But, in all reality.. their just kidding themselves into believing it.

Everybody knows, from their previous posts their not intelligent.

>There, I stuck my two cents in. Why? Because I can.

I'll just sit back, relax and laugh. I'm sure there will be plenty of stupid replies to laugh at. Like most in here, endless and senseless threads about nothing.

Do I care.. heck no.

will I leave my email address, hell no, its not that I'm hiding it. I don't like spam or whinning, sniffling, complaining ham operators.

Now don't get me wrong, there are some pretty decent Ham operators around that act like human beings. Some will talk shop, pass good advice, fun to hang with. And there are others.. can a real definition be found?

Have you been followint the extensive discussion at rec.autos.makers.jeep+willys regarding the installation of a CB in a Wrangler? Yeah, different vehicle, but if the number of messages in that thread, 125 so far, is any indication, I suspect that lots of Liberty owners know a thing or two about installing a CB.

The current topic in that thread, "CB Radio", beings on June 20 of this year.

I spoke to one of the ARRL guys yesterday at ham-com and he said that it is being considered to change the rule from being able to send and receive 5 words a minute to "demonstrate a knowledge of morse code", meaning that during the code test, you would copy the code down, then be allowed to translate it with a 'cheet sheet' if you will.

He said that the minimum ham radio requirements are set by a global committee. I told him that once the 'world' approves this, and then the FCC approves it, I'd take a life membership. I may have misunderstood, but I think he said that England already has this sort of code test.

I thought the ham technician test was very easy. The (commercial) FCC General RTO license I tested for, that was a proper test.

I have nothing against code, but have never been able to learn it or any other languages including computer programming.. and I am interested in restoring tube type plate modulated AM rigs. Needless to say I have several large dummy loads and no interest in CW.

Why do you people watch this moronic "neckcar" garbage? Gee, I can get the

I was looking for a hidden or remote panel cb radio (similar to some mobile ham units) for the car. Has anyone had any experience with the Cobra 75wxST radio?

Also...
Has anyone had any luck with glass-mounted CB antennas? I have heard that they do not handle power well, but for listening use, will they suffice? I need all the overhead clearance I can get (short garage door) so that puts a roof mount out of the question. The only other option I can think of would be a lip mount on my front hood.

Thanks.

Not really, if all you want to hear is a few hundred feet, it will work.

5574. PETITION FILED TO OUTLAW HI-FI SSB ON THE HF BANDS

Newsline has the following report on the problems being caused by those hi-fi SSB operators and a petition to run them off the airwaves:

RADIO LAW: HAMS PETITION TO OUTLAW HI-FI SSB

On-air experimentation with so-called High Fidelity or Enhanced Single Sideband
transmissions could be outlawed if thr FCC adopts a proposed rules change requested by two radio amateurs on opposite sides of the country.
Amateur Radio Newsline's Paul Courson, WA3VJB, reports from the nations capital:

--

A petition for rulemaking was sent to the FCC and accepted by the agency May 27th. It was not immediately issued a Rulemaking Number so it was hard to find in the public record. However, Newsline has talked with two sources who have seen the proposal, and it calls for what many would consider severe bandwidth limitations on HF phone.

The petition asks for a federally mandated bandwidth limit of 2.8
kilohertz for SSB, well below the extended bandwidth needed for what has been called enhanced audio.

One of the two hams who submitted the petition told the FCC they are motivated by interference problems caused by two groups of single sideband operators.
These groups are portrayed by the petitioners as, in both cases, having cast
aside traditional voluntary limits on bandwidth of roughly three kilohertz. The petition therefore asks that these voluntary limits be made mandatory to provide a clear enforcement mechanism for regulators.

The petitioners, Michael Lonneke W0YR of Virginia, and Melvin Ladisky W6FDR of California, said hams from one of the groups come on during radio contests, and are found tweaking their transmitters to splatter purposely to provide elbowroom on a very crowded band. The two men characterize the other group as those who experiment with high-fidelity audio, apparently trying to replicate the sound of FM Broadcast stations.

Newsline has recently reported on advisory letters sent out by FCC Enforcement Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, who wrote to several members of the enhanced SSB group telling them the agency had received interference complaints. The letters did not validate nor dispute the complaints, but warned the stations that if such complaints continued, the unresolved friction could trigger petitions for rulemaking. One such petition is now at hand.

A Newsline reporter spoke with Lonneke, who declined to provide a copy of his petition for this report. He said he and Ladisky hold the same views on the matter of excessive bandwidth causing interference, and that they teamed up on the petition to add strength to their call for regulatory intervention. Lonneke declined further comment, and said the petition will speak for itself if the FCC chooses to assign it a rulemaking number and put it to public comment.

Members of the enhanced SSB group have told Newsline they believe their experimentation with improved audio is totally in line with the spirit of ham radio, and thet when conducted under appropriate conditions, is every bit as justified in bandwidth consumption as any other spectrum-intensive activity, including contesting. But the FCC's Hollingsworth, reacting to such comments, disagreed, suggesting the mode of SSB was commissioned for the amateur service as a spectrum conservation mode, counter to the idea of high-fidelity audio and the bandwidth it requires.

Hollingsworth could not be reached to comment on the proposed Petition, and another FCC official declined to comment.

The petition also mentions the legacy mode of AM, and said it, quote, does not create the same problems that the burgeoning use of so-called 'Hi-Fi Single Sideband' creates. Nonetheless, the petition asks the FCC to impose a 5.6
kilohertz bandwith limitation on AM, with the restrictions asked for on all HF allocations below 28.8 megahertz.

Previous regulatory proposals based on bandwidth have failed, including Docket 20777 from the mid 1970s. The conclusion then was that having loosely-defined technical standards allowed the greatest range of experimentation in ham radio, as long as such signals are clean. Indeed, many present-day violations of splatter, overdriven amplifiers, and poorly administered audio lashups can already trigger enforcement action under existing FCC rules governing the purity of signal.

Reporting for Newsline, Paul Courson, WA3VJB, in Washington

As we go to air, the ten page petition by W0YR and W6FDR has not been been assigned a Rule Making number designation. More on this story in future amateur Radio Newsline reports. (ARNewsline(tm), W5YI)

Cb radios are not always adjusted for optimum performance.....modulation

"Optimum" and "legal" are not mutually exclusive and interchangable,,therefore, your statement is false,,,cb voodoo,,,cb bullshit.

>Modulation is adjusted for the best >performance possible while not

>overmodulating,

Not always true. In some radios the modulation can be turned up (increased) with a mod that will improve the modulation without overmodulating. This is the reason many make use of a power mic, to increase the modulation (make it louder) instead of using a stock mic and factory set modulation. If these radios you speak of were indeed set to "optimum performance" concerning modulation, they would need no power mic.

>because modulation isn't

>subject to legal restrictions except when the

And that's like saying wattage on cb has no restrictions and isn't regulated unless it's over the legal 4 watts AM or 12 watts sideband., in which case it may make the radio illegal....etc,etc,..,, Power mics would not be needed if the radio was already adjusted for "optimum performance" where audio is concerned.
The "optimum performance" you speak of is not optimum nor conducive to quality audio (where cb radio is concerned) which is the reason for power mics and mods.

>Pushing it any higher will just overmodulate

>your radio, splattering your voice across

So any and all mods that increase the audio will overmodulate it? Balderdash. A proper adjustment can often enhance your audio and increase your range. Such mods do exist, Frankie, even if you disagree.

>AM modulation level has nothing to do with >transmit range.

Not in distance per se, but a louder audio can make the difference over WHICH station is heard on the receiving end once the signal is there..and above, I clarified that "Cb's are not always adjusted to optimum performance by the factory" as you claimed..even tossed in the "modulation notwithstanding" to clarify that I was speaking of mods in addition to lone audio mods,

>If your carrier gets there, so does your audio.

You ought learn more about HF operation on AM.You statement does not hold truth when speaking of pile-ups. Allow me to put it this way....,,it may get there, but that doesn't necessitate it being heard. Twenty ops can be throwing the exact same signal,,the audio can, and often is, the deciding factor in who gets heard.

>You can improve intelligibility by increasing

>your average modulation through

>compression,

Which solidifies that the factory has not set the radio for "optimum performance" where audio is concerned. There would be nothing left to improve upon if it was already set at "optmum performance" as you claim.

> but that requires limiting to >significant improvement by tweaking a couple

>extra watts from a stock CB radio

Agreed, Significant improvement can come from a linear amplifier, although proper adjustment of certain radios can maximize performance and few extra watts..also, a tuning adjustment is imperative to "marrying" the radio to the amp,,in some cases,,,an adjustment is required to lower the dead key..my Galaxy dead keys 3 watts and has been subject to four wheeling, salt water, freshwater, and all kinds of abuse,,,,,an old DX model for certain,,never been in the shop (except when it was converted and "adjusted") and absolutely screams on AM. For SSB, I prefer the American made Ten-Tec.

>gains than tweaking the power, gains that are >realized in BOTH transmit AND receive).

Gain can be a relative term. In all practicality, you can improve all you want on a mobile antenna,,,added power, such as an amplifier will win every time as far as providing "greater gains" when speaking of mobile applications.

>Also, tweaking for more power can put quite a >strain on a radio that isn't designed for loads >higher than legal limits

Sure it "can",,but to make certain equal balance is recognized, tweaking slightly for more power (when done correctly) often won't have any negative affects whatsoever on your signal, audio or radio.

Nah,,the statement that isn;t true at all is where you claimed it will "certainly shorten the life of the radio"...one of my Washingtons was peaked, tweaked, and had extras added to it in the eighties,,,,never had a problem with it..guess it all comes down to who was inside your radio..of course,,someone like yourself would never be permitted near ones radio who was serious about optimum performance,,you admitted too many factors that cause distractions and "affect" your work. People such as yourself that blame their incompetence on outside distractions are looking for scapegoats and always in need of abdicating personal responsibility...now if I had an old B & W television that I was gonna toss,,,I might be so inclined to toss it your way for a bench fee of 5 bucks and a repair bill of 10 bucks or so IF you knew what you were doing, but you readily admit allowing other folks personal lives to "affect" your "every day" electronics work,,this is highly indicative of one who can not remain focused on their stated and chosen task, illustrating that you have a ways to go prior to be taken seriously as competent repair tech in any field. A good (even decent) tech doesn't blame cbers for his shoddy work, but then again, you have demonstrated you work much like you post,..incoherent and what is best for yourself with no concern of who you are dealing with.

>And it's not suprising to see that you are one >of them, Twist.

You haven't "seen" anything since I insisted you wear the scarlet "T". Matter of fact, it appears this weekend you were once again drunk and attacking anyone who dared correct your alcoholic induced rants. Several folks this weekend told you about your behavior,,,,,appears that you have quite the problem with all kinds of folks who laugh at you.

>If you want to be loud just buy an amp and join

Please excuse frankie,,,,he has problems expressing himself properly and resorts to inventing words when his frustration levels are exceeded and exhausted. He suffers from twisted-itis and a severe communication deficit..oh,,and he lies all the time...he was forced to admit such this week.

>It's good to see that you are attempting to

But lid-hypocrite,, YOU are the one paying homage to me in my absentia, my name being mentioned in all your posts. Others are even noticing and telling you that you have some problems. Appears that you are quite befuddled....try again to leave such trolling out of your responses, if you can muster the self-respect and self-control that eludes you and is responsible for your lidness.

>If you want to communicate, getting an SSB

>radio would be a great improvement in both >range and clarity.

You know nothing about communication,,you illustrate a penchant for profanity, non-existence baby talk words, ad hominem attacks, off-topic insults, and dwell on the personal lives of those you admire most...quite llustrative of your deficit in communications. .
And one doesn't need a SSB radio to communicate. Matter of fact, you are the last one to look to for advice concerning "communicating" and that, is one undisputed fact known among who's who.

>Forget all those mods and >watts -- improve your antenna, get a good >external speaker and a nice clean mic, and >maybe a speech processor if you got the

A speech processor is not necessary for great sounding cb.

>I didn't say it was. But they sure can make a >big difference even WITH a great sounding

>CB.

You mean it can improve on the already "optimized" audio performance levels set by the factory?
Great antenna system, decent radio, decent mic,,,,and as you said,,an amp if you really want greater range.

>As well as a fine of several thousand dollars if >you get popped by the FCC for running an >amp with a CB.

Bullshit. Why you feel so threatened by cb and the need to sling lies is not even an issue anymore,,we just accept it as part of you. A warning is standard issue from the FCC, no exception. No cber has been prosecuted (during this or the last administration) for merely operating an amp or talking DX or freebanding without receiveing a warning. So, to set the record straight and to slay your bullshit, a warning letter outlining the infractions is to be issued to the offending station as a warning. Fail to heed the warning and you may find yourself facing a fine.

It's not my problem nor dilemma frankie,,,it has been pointed out over the weekend, in my (again) absentia that this little exchange between you and I was not only initiated by you, but is an ongoing problem of yours,,not mine, as you find fault with anyone who doesnt post in a manner you approve of...your ego can't handle such rejection (again, ..your milksop single parent). I have suggested to you, Lelnad, Hall, N8, and Geogre to take your off-topic dilemmas and personal feelings that cause your personal problems to email...however, you will not succeed with demands and footstomping insistence I initiate an email being given the proper text explaining in detail (layman's terms) the dilemma that confounded and embarassed yourself.

True they are adjusted to meet a certain spec set for th by the FCC.

>Not always true. In some radios the modulation can be turned up >(increased) with a mod that will improve the modulation without >overmodulating.

What it the mod then twisty? What mod makes 90-100% modulation sound like 125%? Removal of the mod limiter?

This is the reason many make use of a power mic, to increase the modulation (make it louder) instead of using a stock mic
and factory set modulation. If these radios you speak of were indeed set to "optimum performance" concerning modulation, they would need no power mic.

A power mic is not needed, as you said, just the same as an amplifier is not needed. It is a option those add when they want to make thier radios exceed FCC specs.

> Power mics would not be needed if the radio was already adjusted for
>"optimum performance" where audio is concerned.

Power Mikes are not needed they are wanted and desired for operators who want to sound louder with disregard for the rules.

>The "optimum performance" you speak of is not optimum nor conducive to >quality audio (where cb radio is concerned) which is the reason for >power mics and mods.

If your looking for broadcats quality, your in the wrong hobby, mods are of course illegal and using a power mike after a mod usually makes it even more illegal.

>So any and all mods that increase the audio will overmodulate it?

Yes normally what do you think percentage of modulaion is? your not talking about changing the audio frequency your talkign about the loudness.

Can you name any and all mods, or any mod for that matter that increases audio but does not raise the modulation percentage?

>Balderdash. A proper adjustment can often enhance your audio and >increase your range. Such mods do exist, Frankie, even if you disagree.

So does an amplifier again Illegal, when you mod the radio it becomes ILLEGAL. Get the picture?

>AM modulation level has nothing to do with

>transmit range.

Not in distance per se, but a louder audio can make the difference over WHICH station is heard on the receiving end once the signal is there..and above, I clarified that "Cb's are not always adjusted to optimum performance by the factory" as you claimed..even tossed in the "modulation notwithstanding" to clarify that I was speaking of mods in addition to lone audio mods,

>If your carrier gets there, so does your audio.

You ought learn more about HF operation on AM.You statement does not hold truth when speaking of pile-ups. Allow me to put it this way....,,it may get there, but that doesn't necessitate it being heard. Twenty ops can be throwing the exact same signal,,the audio can, and often is, the deciding factor in who gets heard.

>You can improve intelligibility by increasing

>your average modulation through

>compression,

Which solidifies that the factory has not set the radio for "optimum performance" where audio is concerned. There would be nothing left to improve upon if it was already set at "optmum performance" as you claim.

It is set to a FCC spec's not optimum performance.

If you're not a regular troll... let's see now...

First off, get a pin out of the 6LF6 tube and the 300a amplifier. A google search should find the tube data sheet and www.cbtricks.com will get you a diagram for the amplifier.

Unplug the amplifier... allow it to rest for 20 min to drain the power supply caps down.

Using an ohm meter, measure the resistance from the tube cathodes to ground. Both stages should have less than 100 ohms resistance to ground.

check that first...

"Not a good idea"..? they work fine on the ham bands. Drive the amp in low power mode with 40 watts and they do just fine. They were not cheaply made... actually they are pretty well made when compared to designs like the Dentron and Amp Supply circuits which are/were conventional Amateur Amps.

"no harmonic filtering"..? I guess that pi output circuit means nothing to you. You might as well go say the same thing to the other amp mfgrs...

Splatter from a Palomar 300a most often means the amplifier is over driven. Otherwise they are pretty clean for the most part.

If you have a tube final radio driving the amp in low power mode, chances are the tube radio has a tuned circuit (might be a pi circuit) which will properly match the Palomar.

The 300a in low power mode has no tuned input stage. Tuned input is a big deal. Tube radios have tuned output which works ok for the most part. Solid state radios might require a tuner circuit to provide the proper flywheel effect (tuned input circuit), much less distortion.

owners prefered the smaller desktop footprint and the practical power service into the shack. Made a lot of condo owners choose the smaller desktop Sweep tube Amplifiers made by various mfgrs... including the Palomar brand.

How about a cost effective mid size amplifier. Palomar even used that darn 8950 tube. It along with the common (and current) EL-509/519 and Maco 2057 tubes are considered Sweep type tubes by convention, but never

What makes an amplifier Legitimate...? The 300a was sold as a legal legitimate mid size amplifier. After the FCC "CB amplifier ban", reworked similar type amplifiers appeared on the market under brand names such as Dentron & Amp Supply. Similar type of circuits in a different color cabinet...

Not "limit" skipp, but maybe redirect to a more reliable source. Unless you think people seeking info on radio should be learning cb myths about swing, bird watts, overvolting, and breaking fcc regs.

I was thinking about the same thing. I've never owned a CB before, but I've wanted one for many years. Took a basic electronics class years ago in High School and I used to hook up a CB at my workbench and listen to the truckers while I worked on my assignments. Tons of fun, and amusing too. I'll never forget the 45 minute long argument between two truckers over what was the best Waffle House in Georgia... Or was it Kentucky? Anyway, I wanted to go for a "clean" look if I got one, but since the glass mount antennas seem worthless, I guess something else is in order.

I've been thinking about the magnet mount antennas, but are the permanantly installed ones better? If so, is there a specific antenna or mounting kit designed for the roof rack of a station wagon (or SUV)? I'd rather not drill holes in my vehicle, but if it comes down to that, I wouldn't mind hacking up the roof rack since I never use it for anything. Only thing is, it's made of aluminum, not steel. Does that matter?

I've also been looking at the Cobra radios too, particularly the 18 WX ST II. It is inexpensive, and looks like it will fit below the radio in my car although I haven't actually seen one other than in pictures. Anyone know much about this radio?

You already can! By studying for the license and operating according to the law.
Since I have never operated up on the Gigaherz bands, I don't see that it will affect me in particular. Besides, there is a bill in Congress at the very moment to stop Amateur bands from being pilfered. And its chances are pretty good it'll pass. The Amateur Spectrum Protection Act only last session failed only because Congress just ran out of time before adjournment. Amateur Radio is safer from frequency removal than you think!

Hey, you surprise me with your comprehension! That's precisely what I'm saying, but it's not only for that single post. All you, Georgie-girl, and Douggie-style ever do is troll and cause trouble.
None of you have ever answered a serious question. I have, but I'm not going to get into a contest with you; I don't see any reason to have a battle of wits with an unarmed person like yourself.

I don't have to "chase you around"; you are more than willing to stick your neck out and become a target. You said you were leaving the newsgroup and proved yourself to be a liar by coming right back. You have less credibility than the non-existent Aanal Aaron and you have only yourself to blame for that fact.

But as usual, you avoid and ignore the salient points: Don't you have a broadcast transmitter to work on? It would seem that somebody of your alleged importance would be too busy to troll the UseNet CB group.

More whining hambos! I always thought amateur radio was all about experimenting.

If this is so bad, why is Hi-Fi AM still allowed on 75 meter phone?
Talk about your wide bandwidth!

Why haven't you been chortling in the newsgroup about this > Extra class < ham?

The FCC has levied a $12,000 NAL against Ronald E. Sauer, WE8E, of Bedford Heights (near Cleveland), Ohio for "deliberate and malicious jamming, playing music, and failure to identify" while jamming the Trans-Provincial Net that operates on 7055 kHz over a period of several months. (source ARRL, 23 May)

Hmmm. Let's see here: He's an Extra, he was playing music in the CW portion of the 40 meter band, and he was purposely jamming a scheduled net. You think a $12,000 fine is going to slow him down?

Of course, if this had been a CBer, you'd have posted the information with glee and rubbed it in, wouldn't you? Let's see just how unbiased you really are.

Hi-fi SSB is even wider than 'normal' AM (which occupies 6 KHz). No, the name of the game is reasonable sharing of resources. The original post I only replied to in rec.radio.amateur.policy, but since you posted here, I thought I'd reply. Should those Hi-Fi folks have limited themselves to a quiet area (say 10 meters which is wide or 80 meters during the day), there probably wouldn't have been a problem. I must thank you for posting however; after reading Scott's post (the next thread), I knew there were some other folks I had to do something about. You just reminded me. Thanks.

1. GE MVS 128 Channel VHF Radio with desk mic. Now on 2 meter and public safety channels. Have been using as base station. Has GE desk microphone. Rig is clean and in good condition. $100.00

2. Alinco DJ-191 2 meter HT, 2 batteries, drop-in charger, mobile charger and carrying case. Out-of-band mod has been done. Looks and works like new, box and manual included. $80.00

3. ICOM IC-12U UHF HT. Diode programmable, now on UHF Med channels. No charger for this one but will charge from any 12v source. Standard Icom battery pack. $75.00

4. Alinco DJ-110 2 meter mobile, 5 and 45 watt output, out-of-band mod done on this radio. Have mobile mounting bracket and power cord. No manual or box. $80.00

5. Pair of Motorola HT-440 UHF HT's with one drop-in charger and a few extra batteries. Radios have PL and will talk to each other on one simplex business channel. $50.00

6. Assortment of emergency lights including a magnetic half bar with two rotators and strobe (clear lens) ~~ red "pancake" dashlight ~~ blue Code 3 "dashlaser" ~~ round double flash yellow stobe light ~~ strobe power supply with two blue strobe tubes for mounting in turn signal or head lights. All (except strobe power supply) have cig lighter plugs and all work. $100 for all (you pay shipping on these items).

7. MVS 16 channel, 40 watt VHF mobile. Will do both 2 meter and public safety. Radio is clean with orignal microphone. $75.00

8. President HR-2510 10 meter radio. This radio has been converted to cover CB channels. Seems to work fine, but is missing the plastic "scan" button on the front panel. The switch is still there and works. Radio has orignal microphone with up/down switches. $75.00

No, I think you're referring to the unlicensed devices being able to access some amateur frequencies. In this case, a licensed service is protected from interference from unlicensed devices and the unlicensed devices must put up with any interference from licensed devices. Yes, there is a case where the FCC sent a notice to a consumer about his receiving device causing interference to a licensed amateur on the 2.4 GHz band. Yep, the consumer had to shut off his receiving device and write the manufacturer about fixing or replacing it. Nice try, though.

Jos, are you going to use this amp on 11 meters? Skipp, you should be ashamed of yourself but we forget you get a thrill from urging people to break laws.

Twistys possible answers...

a. I didn't say I USED the Ten Tec I said I preferred it, sonny
b. communication deficit
c. milksop single parent
d. fire school

I'll bet $5 he goes with "a".

hey twist.....didn't gillinad get pissed off at mopar and make some threats, a few years ago, because he thought that mopar had been at the bottom of the situation involving gilligan and his so-called volunteer work with kids.....and gilligan got pissed off when certain parties ran his ass off when they found questionable material on his computer......boy how time flies.........

http://192.168.1.124/default.html won't work

192.168.xxx.xxx is a non-routable block of IP addresses.
This will only work in your subnet. The machine needs a DNS name or you need to set your routing software to pass that UDP/TCP port to that machine.

If you're using a Linksys router, your NIC card is either 10Base/T or half-duplex!!!

Mine puts my 100Base/T cards first and slower and half duplex cards at the end of the IP range.

However, pointing all port 80 access to 192.168.1.124 will stop YOUR browser from functioning. Can you change the HTTP port to something else, then point it at:
http://68.43.72.37:xxx/ replace xxx with the new port #.

Innocent kids were deprived of an educational program because of someones malicious remarks against Frank. Im sure the perpetrator didn't intend for that to happen but taking pride that it did is pretty sick shit indeed.

Ask and it shall be given thee.

The other Idiots of the group:

George-girl Busch WA3MOJ, in Allentown, PA, alleged Extra class ham who can't possibly be active on the bands since he spends all his time trolling here. He has hundreds of "nics" to get around peoples filters but you can always spot him.
Dougie-style Adair N8WWM, in Toledo, OH, a lame no-code Tech who spends his otherwise free time jamming repeaters if he isn't trolling here.
Frankie-boy Gaylliland, in Washington State, who claims to be a commercial broadcast engineer but spends all his time trolling this newsgroup and is a control freak who can't even control himself.

Aanal Aaron H. Voobner doesn't even quality as an Idiot; he has been completely discredited and doesn't exist except as a figment of Georgie-girl and Dougie-style's imagination.

Losers, whiners, and lamers all. For the most part the rest, other than sychophants and followers, are active and interested CBers.

Right it is a troll post so where's Landshark? He usually is the first to complain about troll postings from google with a yahoo account made strictly to inflame, etc.

Well that plus content was strictly to inflame, yahoo account through google, made only 4 post ever, those are a sure sign of a troll post.

It is a cb newsgroup. You can post troll posts and no one will complain as long as you support illegal CB. Contact Landshark at

Well Done Scott, already been done, but what if a legitimate user comes on with the name Aaron?
Oh well, such are causalities
As for the Web2news, done. But complain also about the large amount of bandwidth it wastes, just like newsranger, they'll shut down that source too.

FREE DOWNLOAD, 8-band expanded CB frequency chart shows 4 bands down, 3 up, + CB 40. Find where you are, 25.165 Ch.1 lowest band to 28.755 MHz Ch.40 highest band. Includes the skips too.

www.cbcintl.com/docs/channels.pdf

We'll be adding more freebies as time permits. For links to those freebies we already have up, go to:

I agree, but I don't see you laughing like you did when you posted a similar item about a CBer just a short while back. Maybe because this guy was just a "misguided" ham?

And they aren't even pulling his license for a repeated offense, let alone taking his radio equipment! Isn't that a double standard?

Maybe a word or two to Riley is in order?

Right on! Knew there would be some good folks showing up.......did JD share his worl famous hammie call (Hahah)? .....I made the most of the rain this weekend, it gave up some great DX conditions and I made some great contacts......Tree Climber, 723 Mississippi, Dollar Bill, Rolling Thunder, and 745 in Pennsylvania all sounded good while touching down in the 'pile...BUT,,the loudest was the qso between Baby Boy and the garden's Wild Cat. Oh yea,,unit 21 was also heard, and Rattlesnake with the 8 pill in Tennessee was coming through prettty good, also.

Switching channels to the wax on the tracks:
Who else? Triple-zero-4 in the Black Gold with the 4 pill talking with 44 Magnum,,,make ya' sit up and pay attention,,,,,55 was in there as well,,,JYD made a cameo,,,,,,,,I was having a blast until 101 Cocoa Beach stole my thunder (a station to be reckoned with for sure) ....but it sure was fun!

As Landshark pointed out the "glass mount" antenna uses inductive coupling and a tuned length of RG-174 coax for a counterpoise.
Because the antenna is "decoupled" from the coax it effectively eliminates any unwanted harmonics.
The glass mount antenna could be classified as a "no-ground " antenna making it compatible with fiberglass or plastic vehicles.
HOWEVER.......nothing beats the traditional thru-hole or bracket mount .
The roof rack would make a great counterpoise.
A quick-disconnect is not as good as a folding mount and a Cobra 29LTD is a better choice than a Cobra 18.
Avoid the Sound Tracker model.
If you want to set it and forget it i would recommend a Cobra 25LTD and a Wilson Lil Wil magnet mount.
Good luck and the Waffle House in Richmond Hill has the best food....haha

That 'mod' is called "snipping the limiter", and results in overmodulation. You won't hear it, and the person you are talking with won't hear it, but somebody on a nearby channel will definately hear it.

The radios are set for 90-100% out of the factory. Anything over 100% is called 'overmodulation', and causes splatter. But if the limiter is so weak that a power mic can push it into overmodulation, then your radio is cheap.

If it's over 4 watts AM and 12 watts SSB, there's no 'maybe' about it -- it's illegal. MODULATION doesn't have restrictions because it's PART OF the signal, provided it's 100% or under.

> Power mics would not be needed if the radio was already adjusted for
>"optimum performance" where audio is concerned.

The intended use of a power mic is to improve the quality of the sound by replacing the cheap stock mic. Since different radios have different mic input levels, the level from the aftermarket mic must be adjustable. The easiest way to do that is to use an amplified mic. Turn up the gain until you just hit 100% modulation while tapping on the mic. If someone reports that your voice sounds like a B-52 with asthma, turn it down.

>The "optimum performance" you speak of is not optimum nor conducive to Overmodulation has never been a very popular method for obtaining quality audio in any radio service except the Citizen's Band. Either the keyclowns are wrong, or everybody else involved in radio since it's invention is wrong.

I didn't say "any and all mods". Most mics have a very narrow spectrum that is intended for voice only, and isn't particularly flat within that range. The radios aren't exactly flat, either. The addition of a quality mic will help, and can be enough by itself to realize the radio's potential. And if the audio response of the radio is poor, it can sometimes be modified for an improvement. But it's much easier just to get a speech processor and compensate for the radio's shortcomings.

I understood your original comments. Talking over someone else's signal is rude practice. Regardless, overmodulating your signal -might- improve your chances of being heard, but not necessarily understood. A clear voice is much easier to 'hear' than someone screaming into a power mic.

The radios can only be optimized within their designed capabilities. If the compression circuit isn't there (and it usually isn't), the only way you can get audio compression is from an additional circuit. A simple 'mod' cannot provide compression.

You missed the point: A few extra watts aren't worth the effort. If you start with a 4 watt radio, you need to squeeze out 12 MORE watts just to DOUBLE your range. And that's under ideal circumstances, i.e, something that almost never happens. Yes, you can increase your transmit range with an amp, but that doesn't increase your receive range unless the person you are chatting with also has an amp. And you are shutting out a lot of real-estate to legal CBers.

A better alternative is to use SSB -- vastly more efficient, and NO carrier AT ALL. There are two 1 watt sidebands in a 4 watt AM signal. Remove the carrier and one sideband, and that one sideband will perform just the same as the original 4 watt AM signal. Even better, because it uses half the bandwidth of AM. So, in essence, 1 watt of SSB = 8 watts AM. Now if you are allowed 12 watts SSB, that's equivalent to 96 watts AM! And no license!

That's what CB has to offer. If you want more than that, spend an hour to study for what is probably the easiest test you will ever take in your life.

You mean "swang"? There is no need to reduce the carrier for AM unless you are intending to overdrive the amp.

Gain >IS< a relative term. It's relative to a given reference. For antennas, gain is usually referred to the performance of an ideal dipole. But antennas have one thing an amplifier does not have: reciprocity. IOW, if you have +3dB gain in transmit, you also have +3dB gain in receive. OTOH, if you opt for an amp using an antenna that is worse than a dipole, you might get +10dB in transmit, but -5dB in receive -- not very good for that guy that's trying to be 'heard'.

Like I said before, that "slight" increase isn't going to make much of a difference in transmit. You would be better off tweaking your receiver.

There was one in QST back in the early 60s on two meters with a KW.

Now its done with single yagis and 180watts. Big changes.

Given that in the year 2000, just before the last restructuring, there were probably only about 55,000 "real" 20WPM Extras (based on the assumption that there were at least 20K medical waivers and "cheats" who were simply handed their Extra papers), and figuring about a 3K loss in numbers due to attrition... and given that we now have about 104K Extras today - that means we now have more "Extra Lights" than "20WPM Extras"!

So - CONGRATULATIONS to the ham community in general, we've just passed another big milestone on the way to erasing the perception among the general community, that ham radio is obsolete.

... and in that light... With the increasing amount of sophisticated and low-cost HF rigs becoming available, many more of us "Extra and General Lights" have been getting the chance to play around with the PSK-31 lately - which EVERYONE knows is more efficient than Morse Code.

So, as PSK-31 begins to "MUSCLE OUT" Morse Code, the popularity of HF will resurge, HF rig capabilities will continue to expand, and prices and sizes of these radios will continue to drop... it is hard to understand why the sourpuss 13WPM/20WPM diehards fought so hard, for so long - when it is SO CLEAR that we are all now benefiting from the changes.

No Morse Code Controversy at WRC-03

NEWINGTON, CT, Jun 24, 2003--Whatever else happens at World Radiocommunication Conference 2003 (WRC-03), there's no mystery about the delegates' direction regarding the Morse code requirement. Morse code proficiency will disappear as a treaty obligation for high-frequency access when the International Telecommunication Union (ITU)-sponsored gathering under way in Geneva concludes early next month.

"One matter on which there appears to be no disagreement is the Morse requirement," said International Amateur Radio Union (IARU) Secretary (and ARRL CEO) David Sumner, K1ZZ, in a report on the second week of activity at WRC-03. "It is clear that the outcome will be to leave it to administrations' discretion whether or not to have a Morse receiving and sending requirement. No administration participating in the sub-working group spoke in favor of retaining the Morse code treaty requirement."

Sumner reports that the wording to modify Article 25.5 of the international Radio Regulations on June 24 cleared Working Group 4C, which is dealing with this and other proposals relating to Article 25. It says, "Administrations shall determine whether or not a person seeking a license to operate an amateur station shall prove the ability to send and receive texts in Morse code signals."

Sumner said it's possible but unlikely that the text would be tinkered with further at the committee level or even in the Plenary, which considers items for adoption. Sumner said delegates continue to wrangle over other aspects of Article 25, which defines Amateur Radio operation.

"Optimum" and "legal" are not mutually exclusive and interchangable,,therefore, your statement is false,,,cb voodoo,,,cb
bullshit.

Not always true. In some radios the modulation can be turned up (increased) with a mod that will improve the modulation without overmodulating.

>That 'mod' is called "snipping the limiter", and >results in overmodulation.

You refer to yourself as a broadcast engineer and "snipping the limiter" is the only mod in which you can cite that results in increased modulation?
Another example: Not all stock cb radios "overodulate" when a power mic is applied..illustrating the voodoo bullshit you;re trying to sell by claiming "Cb radios are adjusted for optimum modulation from the factory". You were wrong,Frankie,,so...

>You won't hear it, and the person you are >talking with won't hear it, but somebody on a >nearby channel will definately hear it.

This is the reason many make use of a power mic, to increase the modulation (make it louder) instead of using a stock mic and factory set modulation. If these radios you speak of were indeed set to "optimum performance" concerning modulation, they would need no power mic.

>The radios are set for 90-100% out of the

And that's like saying wattage on cb has no restrictions and isn't regulated unless it's over the legal 4 watts AM or 12 watts sideband., in which case it may make the radio illegal....etc,etc,..,,

>If it's over 4 watts AM and 12 watts SSB,

>there's no 'maybe' about it -- it's illegal.

Well, let's take you at your (ahem) word,,you claimed, and I quote:

>"Anything over 100% is called

>'overmodulation', and causes splatter. "

Yet, here you say, and I quote you again:

>"modulation isn't

>subject to legal restrictions except when the >radio is overmodulated,

>in which case it may >make the radio illegal by causing RFI/splatter

So, you now have back-pedaled claiming it MAY make it splatter, as opposed to saying it does cause splatter. Extracting such apologies disguised as an admittance or flip-flop is alright,,the end result is the same..

>MODULATION doesn't have restrictions

>because it's PART OF the signal, provided it's

Power mics would not be needed if the radio was already adjusted for "optimum performance" where audio is concerned.

LOL...boy, your head sure is twisted,,I just said the same thing,,that one purchases a power mic to improve the audio...yet again, drawing upon your vast self-described broadcast engineer experience, you contradict yourself. If the audio was adjusted for optimum performance by the factory (as you claimed it was),,,power mics wold not enhance such audio. You can attempt all the diversions in the world by calling it "sound" ,"tone" "clarity" or whatever,,fact remains,,if the audio was already "optimum" as you claimed it was,,,nothing would be left to do to enhance such audio...like adding a power mic.

The "optimum performance" you speak of is not optimum nor conducive to quality audio (where cb radio is concerned) which is the reason for power mics and mods.

>Overmodulation has never been a very >popular method for obtaining quality audio in

Not in distance per se, but a louder audio can make the difference over WHICH station is heard on the receiving end once the signal is there..and above, I clarified that "Cb's are not always adjusted to optimum performance by the factory" as you claimed..even tossed in the "modulation notwithstanding" to clarify that I was speaking of mods in addition to lone audio mods,

>I understood your original comments. Talking >over someone else's signal is rude practice.

Contesting is legal, Frankie,,despite your personal feelings and heavily involved and battered ego..

You ought learn more about HF operation on AM.You statement does not hold truth when speaking of pile-ups. Allow me to put it this way.....,,it may get there, but that doesn't necessitate it being heard. Twenty ops can be throwing the exact same signal,,the audio can, and often is, the deciding factor in who gets heard.

>Did you know that there are 40 channels >available on the CB?

As there is other cb groups. Ironic, huh?
I know it's tough for you to recognize when you make such goofs,,it doesn't bode well with your repeated attempts at off-topic claims such as being a self-described broadcast engineer.

>You can improve intelligibility by increasing

>your average modulation through

>compression,

Which solidifies that the factory has not set the radio for "optimum performance" where audio is concerned. There would be nothing left to improve upon if it was already set at "optmum performance" as you claim.

>The radios can only be optimized within their >designed capabilities.

LOL..nevertheless,,,you said it (audio made optimum on cb radios) was done in the factory.

>If the compression circuit isn't there (and it >usually isn't), the only way you can get audio >compression is from an additional circuit. A Overmodulation has nothing to do with the subject, Frankie,,,,you entered it as a failed deflected defense to your gaffe.

>necessarily a good thing, either. Ideally, it >takes four times as much output power just to

Agreed, Significant improvement can come from a linear amplifier, although proper adjustment of certain radios can maximize performance and few extra watts.

>You missed the point: A few extra watts aren't >worth the effort.

To who? To you? To the radio? To some, it is definitely worth the effort, especially when running a linear. Some tweaking requires the actual lowering from 4 watts to 3.

>If you start with a 4 watt radio, you need to >squeeze out 12 MORE watts just to DOUBLE >your range.

You are the only one speaking of overmodulation and doubling range. You stand corrected concerning a pile-up and audio making the possible difference.

> And that's under ideal circumstances, i.e, >something that almost never happens. Yes, >you can increase your transmit range with an

It would appear that during this skip cycle, most cbers being heard dxing have more than 4 watts. It is a well-known fact many hammies talk illegally on cb and the freeband...the FCC tapes tell the tales.

>And you are shutting out a >lot of real-estate to legal CBers.

Not shutting out any legal cbers on the freeband.

>A better alternative is to use SSB -- vastly >more efficient, and NO carrier AT ALL.

Alternative to what, Frankie? Some cb radios don't have sideband. Sideband isn't practical in many examples,,such as truck driving.

>That's what CB has to offer. If you want more >than that, spend an hour to study for what is >probably the easiest test you will ever take in >your life.

No thanks. I have everything a man could ask for without the additional volunteer headache Uncle Charlie could induce by means of harassment. Besides,,I like the freeband way better than the HF hammie bands and repeaters. And I do it barefoot 99% of the time..only time I use power, is when it's something really rare and I have exhausted myself with my 3 watts..then, and only then, I may elect to toss out a hundred watts,,,maximum. That "crime" is less than the fine and imprisonment that you can get for taping a movie from HBO,,and don;t tell me recording is permitted for "private viewing",,it's not and says so very clearly at the beginning of any HBO movie....it says that it is intended for "private viewing" only and any "unauthorized reproductions" are prohibited by law.which means, unless you have HBO's exclusive permission to tape the movie, you may NOT replicate it in any manner whatsoever, nor may you charge another to view the original broadcast in your home. A broadcast engineer should be privy to his own federal law breaking prior to casting heap big stones at another for similar behavior.

also, a tuning adjustment is imperative to "marrying" the radio to the amp,

>Not necessarily.

>,in some cases,,

Most of the time either the amp or radio must be adjusted.

,an adjustment is required to lower the dead key.

>You mean "swang"? There is no need to >reduce the carrier for AM unless you are >intending to overdrive the amp.

Opinion noted.
My Galaxy dead keys 3 watts and has been subject to four wheeling, salt water, freshwater, and all kinds of abuse,,,,,an old DX model for certain,,never been in the shop (except when it was converted and "adjusted") and absolutely screams on AM.

>I don't doubt it.

For SSB, I prefer the American made Ten-Tec.

>Ever try buiding your own rig?

Sure,,I built AM receivers out of Quaker Oats round boxes as a kid.

>(improving the antenna will provide greater

>gains than tweaking the power, gains that are

Gain can be a relative term. In all practicality, you can improve all you want on a mobile antenna,,,added power, such as an amplifier will win every time as far as providing "greater gains" when speaking of mobile applications.

>Gain >IS< a relative term. It's relative to a

Sure it "can",,but to make certain equal balance is recognized, tweaking slightly for more power (when done correctly) often won't have any negative affects whatsoever on your signal, audio or radio.

>Like I said before, that "slight" increase isn't >going to make much of a difference in

I won't argue your opinion, however, down here in the flatlands, especially on open water, I formed a slightly differing opinion.

To hell with that,,,,,that's why I have a beam,,,I hear too much now...I didn't get a beam to improve my home-20 signal, I attained it to tune others out.

guess it all comes down to who was inside your radio.

I have no problem with experimenting, even experimenting with wide SSB.

The problem is doing it on 75 or 20 meters where it causes un-necessary interference. The un-necessary interference is the problem.

No Morse Code Controversy at WRC-03
NEWINGTON, CT, Jun 24, 2003--Whatever else happens at World Radiocommunication Conference 2003 (WRC-03), there's no mystery about the delegates' direction regarding the Morse code requirement. Morse code proficiency will disappear as a treaty obligation for high-frequency access when the International Telecommunication Union (ITU)-sponsored gathering under way in Geneva concludes early next month.
"One matter on which there appears to be no disagreement is the Morse requirement," said International Amateur Radio Union (IARU) Secretary (and ARRL CEO) David Sumner, K1ZZ, in a report on the second week of activity at WRC-03. "It is clear that the outcome will be to leave it to administrations' discretion whether or not to have a Morse receiving and sending requirement. No administration participating in the sub-working group spoke in favor of retaining the Morse code treaty requirement."
Sumner reports that the wording to modify Article 25.5 of the international Radio Regulations on June 24 cleared Working Group 4C, which is dealing with this and other proposals relating to Article 25. It says, "Administrations shall determine whether or not a person seeking a license to operate an amateur station shall prove the ability to send and receive texts in Morse code signals."
Sumner said it's possible but unlikely that the text would be tinkered with further at the committee level or even in the Plenary, which considers items for adoption. Sumner said delegates continue to wrangle over other aspects of Article 25, which defines Amateur Radio operation.

Agenda item 1.7.1 (Article 25): The proposals relating to Article 25 have occupied several hours of discussion in Sub-Working Group 4C3. It has been difficult going, with the Arab Group showing great reluctance to accept simplification and streamlining of some of the international regulations governing the amateur service. One matter on which there appears to be no disagreement is the Morse requirement. It is clear that the outcome will be to leave it to administrations' discretion whether or not to have a Morse receiving and sending requirement. No administration participating in the Sub-Working Group spoke in favor of retaining the Morse code treaty requirement.

I seem to remember a series of articles on one of the Ham mags using BC-348 surplus HF receivers with simple converters for moonbounce, not easy but doable with a little ingenuity and persistence.

Mind you that was when I was home brewing 14 tube HF SSB rigs - now I can afford and use commerical rigs which are somewhat more versatile and smaller.
Still have a pile of parts including mechanical and crystal SSB filters for 'the next one', but I doubt I'll live long enough - got lazy like so many of us. But, it most definitely ain't anywhere near as much fun or nearly as satisfying

I see no reason why a 348 couldn't be used as a IF. If the noise figure was decent enough on the converter.

I don't remember that article, but Id say they were using a 417a, or a 416B triode tube for the RF side of things and possibly a 6J6 for the osc/mult chain. eh?

A way of saying "If the band is empty, go ahead and play with it, but if things are crowded, forget it". This could also open up other wide band modes like spread spectrum on HF,
"okay to experiment if the band is empty". IF these modes can be shown to not trash more traditional modes, then they could be permitted in more crowded times.

Oh yes the TS130sv that's quite a market for a 5 watt drive amplifier I bet there was quite a demand for these LOL. Oh BTW how come I never heard these palomar amps advertised in ham mags or ham stores?

No, I think the article being referred to came later. It was in the November 1972 issue of 73 (it was the thickest issue to that point, and had an article about "building" a computer). The article, by someone named Brown, was more an idea article about low cost moonbounce. So by that point it was transistorized converters. There was an article or two that followed about some conversions he did to the 348, and he wrote a slew of articles that in some way referenced the main project. But, the moonbounce seemed to be a pipe dream, while he persued all kinds of other things.

Hey, lamer: YOU posted it. Short memory?

Try looking in the archives instead of expecting someone else to do

Nope. But he can certainly look in the UseNet archive to see where HE said it. His response so far is his typical cop-out.

And your response so far is your typical TROLL.

And it's about freakin' time! Good riddance to a totally obsolete form of so-called communication. When the military and the Coast Guard don't use it anymore, there's simply no reason to require it for AMATEUR radio.

Hey Dougie-style Adairierre: You can't post without some lame sexual innuendo, can you? If you and your buddies (Georgie-girl and Frankie-boy) would just go away, people could get back to serious discussion here. You're not accomplishing anything posting drivel in an esoteric UseNet CB newsgroup. Except for wasting a lot of time.

A reminder of sacrifices paid..... Texas is a state where our military is respected...

What follows is a message from Vicki Pierce about her nephew James' funeral (he was serving our country in Iraq):

"I'm back, it was certainly a quick trip, but I have to also say it was one of the most amazing experiences of my life. There is a lot to be said for growing up in a small town in Texas.

The service itself was impressive with wonderful flowers and sprays, a portrait of James, his uniform and boots, his awards and ribbons, his boots. There was lots of military brass and an eloquent (though inappropriately longwinded) Baptist preacher. There were easily 1000 people at the service, filling the church sanctuary as well as the fellowship hall and spilling out into the parking lot.

However, the most incredible thing was what happened following the service on the way to the cemetery. We went to our cars and drove to the cemetery escorted by at least 10 police cars with lights flashing and some other emergency vehicles, with Texas Rangers handling traffic. Everyone on the road who was not in the procession, pulled over, got out of their cars, and stood silently and respectfully, some put their hands over their hearts, some had small flags. Shop keepers came outside with their customers and did the same thing. Construction workers stopped their work, got off their equipment and put their hands over their hearts, too. There was no noise whatsoever except a few birds and the quiet hum of cars going slowly up the road.

When we turned off the highway suddenly there were teenage boys along both sides of the street about every 20 feet or so, all holding large American flags on long flag poles, and again with their hands on their hearts. We thought at first it was the Boy Scouts or 4F club or something, but it continued .... for two and a half miles. Hundreds of young people, standing silently on the side of the road with flags. At one point we passed an elementary school, and all the children were outside, shoulder to shoulder holding flags ... kindergartners, handicapped, teachers, staff, everyone. Some held signs of love and support. Then came teenage girls and younger boys, all holding flags. Then adults. Then families. All standing silently on the side of the road. No one spoke, not even the very young children. The last few turns found people crowded together holding flags or with their hands on their hearts. Some were on horseback.

The military presence...at least two generals, a fist full of colonels, and representatives from every branch of the service, plus the color guard which attended James, and some who served with him ... was very impressive and respectful, but the love and pride from this community who had lost one of their own was the most amazing thing I've ever been privileged to witness.

I've attached some pictures, some are blurry (we were moving), but you can get a small idea of what this was like. Thanks so much for all the prayers and support."

I have the .PPT presentation if anyone is interested. Email me at cowboy67111
at yahoo dot com
and I will get it off to you.

No they aren't, not on Newsranger headers. That's why Monaco contacted Newsranger and got the info from them. You will have to contact them if you want the specifics. The headers posted are complete. And I noticed that you didn't respond to your other forgeries, including the ones that -did- have your ISP number in the header, such as a couple where you accuse me of child molestation, and one where you forge KC8JBO (that -was- a forgery, right?).

Again, I didn't say that. In fact, I said that compression will increase your average modulation level. But you don't get compression by snipping the limiter.

I didn't say "all stock cb radios..." overmodulate with a power mic. I said that if the limiter is weak enough to be overdriven by a power mic, the radio is probably cheap.

Hardly. If you were modulating at 100% all the time, the only thing you are putting out is a constant level of audio -- no dynamics, and therefore no information. You might as well just plug a pink noise generator into the mic jack.

It's clear that your purpose in this thread is not to discuss radio. You are attempting to open up a second battle front under the guise of a technical discussion, but I'm not going there, Twist. Feel free to disseminate all the technical mumbo-jumbo you like -- it's all been disproven before, and will be disproven again even after you're gone.

In the first place, selectively snipping the ISP number from newsranger posts when they are readily available illustrates your juvenile attempts. If anyone other than yourself is to be bothered with a post that upset your cookie and tea cart years ago and seek out the newsranger posts you attribute to myself in the google archive, one

Excellent question, Shark:

Notice that some of the headers have a thing called a "no archive flag". If it's set ("X-No-Archive: yes"), then Google will not add the post to their archive.
But that doesn't mean someone didn't reply to the post and quote it in part or in whole, or that someone didn't save it for their own archive as I did. So instead of using the "author" field, try searching for the author in the "phrase" field, or search for a key phrase from the body of the message.

Ok, I think I get it now -- an anonymous person posting from Google isn't a troll if you like what they say; and anyone, anonymous or not, IS a troll if they annoy you because you have neither a killfile nor the self-discipline not to read their posts. Is that how it works, Shark? So anyone can troll all they want just as long as they appease you by writing things that meet with your approval?

Now just where in that post do I say I think the hijackers are heroes? Huh? Where dickiebird, point it out. Do a search on my id in google groups with the word heroes and you won't find any post where I call the hijackers heroes. Whereas you seem to think they had just cause for their actions. Wonder why we are not suprised at such from you dickieboy?

IIRC I did suggest he try hooking up an antenna to the radio.
Guess that was just to technical for him to handle.

Of course you didn't. But you DID say that you couldn't hear anything on 10 meters. I thought he was being gracious by not suggesting that you are too stupid to turn on the radio or turn up the volume. But since you don't talk about anything else related to radio, and do nothing in this newsgroup but troll (yes, Shark, he is a troll), it's looking more and more like the problem is with your intelligence.

Bla bla bla this one lied, that one lied, etc etc etc same tired old material from Cranium, nothing new whatsoever. Damn right you admire Twisty he at least knows how to use his criminally insane mind, he comes up with bizarre insults [milksop etc] and crazy distractors [fire school etc] he at least knows his trollcraft, you sir are a rank amateur of trollism compared to him. I see you still troll the shortwave group and some others huh, maybe you're spreading yourself too thin. Hey I have an idea, I have yet to hear a valid argument for illegal CB from you or him, why not get cracking on that.

Like many Alpha Tango members I have DXed over 100 confirmed countries on 12 whiskey SSB, worldwide without the need for license or expense of ham radio.

I have everything a man could ask for without the additional volunteer headache Uncle Charlie could induce by means of harassment. Besides,,I like the freeband way better than the HF hammie bands and repeaters.

And I do it barefoot 99% of the time..only time I use power, is when it's something really rare and I have exhausted myself with my 3 watts..then, and only then, I may elect to toss out a hundred watts,,,maximum. That "crime" is less than the fine and imprisonment that you can get for taping a movie from HBO.

No cber has been prosecuted (during this or the last administration) for merely operating an amp or talking DX or freebanding without receiveing a warning. So, to set the record straight, a warning letter outlining the infractions is to be issued to the offending station as a warning. Fail to heed the warning and you may find yourself facing a fine. Underline the word "may". This reduces the relative risk and associated penalty to a petty infraction comparable to jaywalking.

I have spoken to Mr. Hollingsworth personally, and I can assure you, even if he thinks that slightly exceeding power limits is ok, he can't verbalize it due his present position.

There are many hammies on the freeband...and guess what? They are cool as all get out!!! Us cbersare a friendlier lot. We really don'tgive a rat's azz if a hammie talks on cb,,,we'lll talk to him anyways...probably why they come on down in the first place,,,so they can escape the frequency fuzz and just......enjoy radio.

Very True John, be that as it may, but remember when responding to a post in here, if you respond via someone else's post because you have that person kill filed, you will then be labeled as having an imaginary kill file.
Use that kill file they can't seem to use..............

If u have tried one center-loaded antenna........
u have tried them all.
A certain CB shop in Texarcana,Ar. went so far as to tell me that the coil on his mostly copper antennas radiated more than just heat.
Everybody makes a coily antenna and claims that it's better than the next one.
The fact is that coils do not radiate RF energy.....only heat, just like the coil
on your stove when u force current thru it.
Heavier conductors only permit higher current flow with less resistance.
Since RF currents flow on the surface of a conductor (skin effect)
i would prefer a material that is beneficial to RF current flow such as copper.
1/4~ radiators have the highest angle of radiation, especially when they are used in a mobile environment.
Since the antenna is mounted less than a full-wave (36ft.) above the ground it is subject to reflections from the ground making it's angle of radiation even higher.
So know that you realize that you did'nt know jack about RF radiation you should buy a 9ft. whip and be done with it.

This is where your hypocrisy shine thru Landfag, If a person is killfiled, then why would you reposnd to them via another post? I thought the whole idea behind a killfile was to not read or reply to the person in the killfile. Very simple concept even a queen like you should be able to grasp.

That's pretty funny...post it if you have something from an ISP that

In the first place, selectively snipping the ISP number from newsranger

Hey, yea...why not? Then perhaps you will find all the sourceforge.net posts made by others, like Lelnad,,,,you done cooked yourself Frankie,,,and you;re a bit overdone

i have been saying something very similar to this for a long time.........those coil antennas are pretty, no doubt about it........but they make no radio sense to me.........9 foot whip with a teflon dielectric is the only way to go.......

Tell ya what, buttbreath, obviously you're just stating an opinion that he stated an opinion. Unless you're in bed with him (which is quite possible) there's no way for you to know that. And > he < posted it repeatedly as a supposedly factual statement, not an opinion.

Well, we know it couldn't be your overwrought little mind since you've obviously not got a mind.

JJ is still the only person I know of that referred to the 9/11 hijackers and used the word "heroes" in the same sentence. Gee, what does that mean to you?

But ain't it funny? When one of the Trolls gets himself cornered, all the other Trolls circle the wagons and come to his defense! You think JJ couldn't double-talk his way out of it the same way he double-talked his way into it? I see you have a very high opinion of JJ. LOL!!

You could always ask the manufacturers how many radios they've sold, assuming you're truly interested and not just Trolling as usual.

He never stated that it was an "opinion", buttbreath. He repeatedly posted it as a supposed fact. And you're obviously just posting your opinion that he posted his opinion, because there's no way for you to know whether he did or didn't from what he posted.

So unless you're sleeping with him, there's no way you can speak for him, is there.

What, you don't think JJ can double-talk his way out of it the same way he double-talked his way into it?

I'm sure they "had cause for their actions", but I certainly wouldn't call them heroes like you did. You and I might not understand their reasons, but people don't sacrifice their lives for nothing, JJ.

And you are still the only person I've read so far who referred to the hijackers and used the word "heroes" in the same sentence. Maybe if you didn't try to answer questions posed to someone else you wouldn't find yourself cornered.

Remember: It's better to be silent and thought a fool than to open mouth and remove all doubt.

LOL, ask them ho many radios they sold? over what time period? How many peol have more than 1 radio? How many have more than 2?
How many were hacked up by shady techs? You made the statement yet offer no

OK reading comprehension challenged. Try this, I do not think the hijackers were heroes. Now there, I used the words hijackers and heroes in the same sentence. Do you still interpret that as me saying they were heroes?

You still have trouble with reading comprehension, nowhere did I call them heroes. In the posting I implied that you were the one who considered them heroes. Get some six year old to read it and explain it to you.

Wrong. They are checked 'yes' if the post is -not- to be archived. And not all of them are flagged, so some can be found on Google, even several more of your KC8JBO 'forgeries'. I just cut and pasted from my own archive because it was

yourself. Yeah, I think I'll just let you sit and stew for a while. But don't

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out!

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

www.cbcintl.com

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

Yeah but fun ;^)

console, dash & all it's parts what's left to put in.

You obviously -don't- understand any of it, Hypocrite Landshark, which is suprising because it's really easy to understand: The posts listed were posted through web-based newsgroup providers and traced back to Twisty's webtv server, hence the similar IP numbers. If I didn't know any better I might think that you are trying to intentionally distort the facts. But you wouldn't do THAT, would you, Hypocrite Landshark?

Well it may be dumb ass ham humor, but I wish I could kick the ass of all the dumb asses that tune up for minutes on end on the air on or near a weak DX station. As for tuning into an imperfect antenna, you can use a dummy load to get close, then touch it up on the air QUICKLY! The ham bands would be a nicer place to listen to if everyone had a dummy load and used it. So stupid is as stupid does....

TOP 10 DOG PET PEEVES ABOUT HUMANS
1. Blaming your farts on me...not funny...not funny
2. Yelling at me for barking... I'M A FRIGGIN' DOG YOU IDIOT!!
3. Taking me for a walk, then not letting me check stuff out. Exactly who's walk is this anyway?
4. Any trick that involves balancing food on my nose...stop it.
5. Any haircut that involves bows or ribbons. Now you know why we chew your stuff up when you're not home.
6. The sleight of hand, fake fetch throw. You fooled a dog! What a proud moment for the top of the food chain, you nitwit.
7. Taking me to the vet for "the big snip", then acting surprised when I freak out every time we go back.
8. Getting upset when I sniff the crotches of your guests. Sorry but I haven't quite mastered that handshake thing yet.
9. How you act disgusted when I lick myself. Look, we both know the truth, you're just jealous.
10. Dog sweaters. Have you noticed the fur?

You know Frank, you do have valid arguments and points at times. That being said, as of late, you've been the homeless person with no direction. Please find something that you can make a difference whining about.

Constant reminders from people like Aaron, serve as that little voice of decency. It is hoped that those that never fully understood the implications of their actions, will reconsider them. While those, for whom there is no hope, will eventually get tired of reading it and leave to fester in their own sewer of illegal activity. - Leland C. Scott

There are many people out there that are "on the fence" with regard to whether or not to follow the law or not. Those are the people that will hopefully read what is discussed here and decide that it might not be a good idea to break the law. THOSE are the people that we're trying to reach. Those that are hopelessly incorrigable will continue their anti-social ways until the law finally catches up with them. Of course you can't blame those of us that understand the purpose of law, from assisting the people entrusted with enforcing the law, by gathering evidence for them. It's called looking after our best interests. -Dave Hall

with ISP TOS's. For somebody who doesn't give a flip about Part 95, then gets bent out of shape over somebody making fun of a cartoon character, whom he happens to choose to identify himself.
Then he posted the little gem below a while back, which basically is sticking a boot in his mouth

been running off at the mouth lately.

I hope he makes it clear in his list which frequencies are legal, illegal, CB and Amateur, that they need a licence for Amateur, and what the penalties are for those caught illegally using frequencies.
Otherwise, he is misleading people.

If, with the full info, people still decide to take the risk, that's their choice... at least they were not tricked into it.

You cut and pasted from your own browser only to eliminate the ISP number, as all the webtv posts have the authentication spool train,,ask Lelnad what that means,,, it's the reason you, he and Geogre couldn't get me bounced, despite the misdirected anger and misdirected blame claiming otherwise, in fact, yours, Leland's and Geo's entire existence has been dedicated to attempts at stifling and censoring,,,hence your shared impotence and ignorance.....you keep blaming the wrong person and can't tell what comes from where,,,all originating with your communication deficit.

Not true. Your ignorance reigns supreme again. As a matter of fact, anyone can go to the msn home page and click on the appropriate links and it will list the very few news services that ARE compatable with webtv. Always another beautiful day in paradise. If you were happy with yourself, it would radiate through your posts like the joy does mine.....you have problems with the man in the mirror. Self-hatred is a terrible thing, Frankie. It shows in all your posts. Cheers, lad.

There are many people out there that are "on the fence" with regard to whether or not to follow the law or not. Those are the people that will hopefully read what is discussed here and decide that it might not be a good idea to break the law. THOSE are the people that we're trying to reach. Those that are hopelessly incorrigable will continue their anti-social ways until the law finally catches up with them. Of course you can't blame those of us that understand the purpose of law, from assisting the people entrusted with enforcing the law, by gathering evidence for them. Lou's chart is absolutely misleading, it has freqs above 28 mhz listed as HI-HI-40 and below 25 mhz as CB -160 and there is nothing about the licensed users of those freqs, its all screwed up and Lou doesn't care.

>Another lie.

Perhaps it is....but,,consider the internet and you already claimed what I (a cartoon chracter) say is meaningless,,,so why let it bother you,? I mean, that really speaks volumes of your post,,,LOL,,,,anyway...,,that's what the word is in the big-azzed-linear-illegal-no-ducks-cb-radio room...that he took to posting from web2news when he lost his account...I interjected on his behalf and told of the email exchange I had with him, so "I" knew his isp wasn't yanked...nevertheless, it was claimed by an illegal cber and part-time hammie that perhaps it was just his access to the group that was taken away,,yet another suggested he had a comcast account....what I do know, is the FCC has been alerted by an illegal cber and part time hammie that certain hammies are providing addresses other than where they reside and a list of "suggestions" were offered up for them to "ascertain" the truth. Seems that despite a great daydream one set forth not so long ago, the address a hammie provides the FCC must indeed be their principal residence and not merely a "contact" address. Seems this may be a wide-spread problem, and should the whip come down, I am 50% certain those responsible for the animosity that forced such action will be thanked publically. Call it the official observer program in reverse. You think all the hammies getting popped are just coincidentally breaking the law at the same time uncle charlie just happens to be listening? LOL....you got another thing comin'...(nod to JP).

It's interesting what shows on the logs when I have my FreeBSD machine in line with the internet feed. Have fun smacking my router.

Lots of radio pings this weekend. It's Field Day. 1400 local time Saturday to 1400 local time Sunday. If our ham trolls are here this weekend, they must have gotten banned from all the ARC's.

Scott,
I simply haven't fired up the high power 6 aa alkaline batteries :)
You have no idea what a 'ping' can be!

Very interesting things to hear on IRLP. I may be on HF for some part of this weekend. Don't know times or bands. I know this ARC sets up a WHOLE bunch of antennas in a county park. I've been there before.

Dinner is chicken and ribs at 1800. And whatever else is pot-luck!!! Bring Tums. <:

You're still whining about a minor problem; if it were so pervacive I wouldn't have had such a problem confirming it. And you have not laughed with glee about WE8E even yet. Unbiased? I don't think so.

And you have proven yourself to be a complete moron.

You're still the only person to refer to the 9/11 hijackers and use the word "heroes" in the same sentence. Which says a lot about your mental state!

Another post that proves Frankie-boy is a moron. I never said that at all; I said that I hadn't heard any of the so-called intruders on 10 meters. And, except for one single episode, I still haven't.

Anything else is an assumption made by moron TROLLS like JJ and the ever more desparate control freak Frankie-boy.

And now Frankie-boy speaks for JJ? What a low opinion of him you must have! ROTFLMAO!!

Let's see now; this is at least the 10th or 12th WHINING post from Frankie-boy in the last week.

And I don't see where he "whined" about George; he posted factual information that George had confessed to forging as Aanal Aaron by way of AoL, which we all know already.

Get a life, Frankie-boy. Don't you have a commercial xmtr to fix? Har

So sad to hear of the death of the young Cameroon football star, Marc Vivien Foe.
My 10 Year old Son was stunned by the news, just before the France / Turkey match last night... he just couldn't accept that it was true. When I told him, he kept asking if I was joking, was it real, am I sure.

The tears shed in front of millions of people, by some such as Henry, just goes to show how well liked Foe was and how shocked people were.
The final is still to go ahead as planned... I hope the team can still put in their best performance, as they will clearly be affected by the death.

I know it's off topic, but I just had to share it.

Regards,

Peter.

Words of wisdom. Somewhere, someone wrote:
To be certain, communicative anonymity encourages folks to post requests for information to public forums and bulletin boards about subject matters they may find too personal or sensitive to discuss if there were a chance the message post may be traced to its origin. In addition to the more than obvious psychological benefits to those who find themselves enabled to communicate effectively, there also may be external benefits to the entire community.
To speak of taboo or unpopular subjects with no fear of retaliation can, and has, resulted in movements that lead to the overturning of poorly designed laws, very much like the role selective civil disobedience holds in history regarding the forging of our country.

Caution for privacy on the internet should be of particular concern as data-collection technology improves. In most cases, any post to public newsgroups, forums or bulletin board is archived and available to search, perhaps for eternity.
Social experts agree anonymous communication, traceable or otherwise, fosters development of the digital personae, resulting in the experience of euphoric liberation.
Options such as creating internet anonymous identities, is likely to increase and enhance both quantity and quality of speech, including debate.

Electronic internet communications giving no information concerning the race, sex, age, religion, or origin of authors must be judged on nothing but content, as nothing else exists to judge. This prevents those who would stereo-type, attempt bigotry or sabotage by non-related topics. This inevitably leads to the concentration on the merits of the post rather than assumed or presumed qualities of the poster.

In America, anonymous speech is not only guaranteed but protected. In America, anonymous speech benefits all. In America, there is no concept of "hiding behind freedom of speech" as some prefer to have us believe. In America, freedom of speech with anonymity is a right. History hands us The Federalist Papers. These papers were the new nation's most single influential political tract. "Publius" was the name under which the papers were pseudonymously published.

The Supreme Court holds the guarantee of freedom of speech via the First Amendment and the Constitution protects the right of anonymous association.
The court also upheld that a state lacks the power to compel clubs or organizations to disclose names of its members unless clear indication of law violation is given, in which the state must follow lawful procedure protocol.

In upholding such freedoms, the court protects members of organizations from the hands of radicals and bigots who would have access to identities if the state prevailed.

A friend's widow has just given me these 2 radios. They have no mic and no power cords .I do not know if they work or not,but,the exterior seems to be in reasonable used shape.I am not a radio guy. I thought they were just regular CB's.Are they worth anything? Is there an inexpensive way to check if they work without buying power cords and mics,antenna,etc?

A friend's widow has just given me these 2 radios. They have no mic and no power cords .I do not know if they work or not,but,the exterior seems to be in reasonable used shape.I am not a radio guy. I thought they were just regular CB's.Are they worth anything? Is there an inexpensive way to check if they work without buying power cords and mics,antenna,etc?

These are ten meter radios easily converted to the cb band. The reason for such conversions is to have a hopped up hybrid cb/ten meter radio, usually exceeding the 4 watt limit on cb radios imposed by the FCC. A conversion will also open up many more frequencies to the radio. This is not illegal to own or listen to, but is illegal to transmit on the cb band and anywhere else without proper licensure, which is as easy to obtain as sending away for an electronics degree on a matchbook. The Galaxy 88 is not a bad radio for use on cb and they are well known for their loudness on AM, something that is coveted a great deal in cb land. I have no experience with the other radio. No way of ascertaining if the radios work if you have no way to power them up. Where do you live? Chances are we can find a tech somewhere near you to assist with your endeavors. Good luck.

As opposed to the hybrid ten meter/cb radio that is responsible for the downfall and loss of common sense of some.

You changed your nic, does a kill file work when you, as a troll so want attention that you change it regularly? As for feeding them, nope just informing others of you activity.

Now please, do as expected and change it again

No No I didn't fag shark you responded to anita beer, rememebr you kill filed that the other day.
And lets say you didn't kill file it why are you replying to me? Then killfile me LOL
Do you have to have the last word? Why do you reply to me then tell me I am killfiled?
Why would you reply to someone who you cough:: cough:: killfile? Because you are possessed.
Now go wash off.

sir,
freebanding is NOT a hobby.

its a deliberate and amlicious violation of federal rules and regulations (those being policy, and thus according to the US supreme court, have the affact and power of law).

you want to attract attention, fine. just don't try to take others with you when you go down.

BTW, this applies to all those hams that choose to use gear on 11 meters. better make sure its type approved. If not, well, you get the picture.

That's like saying the turnips in the veggie section aren't vegetables because the sign only says 'turnips'. Or that turnips have all the characteristics of a vegetable -only- because they are sold in the vegetable isle. I don't know about you, but I think turnips are sold in the veggie isle not because they are -like- vegetables, but because they ARE vegetables. And rules, regulations, statutes, ordinances, acts, codes and charters are not just -like- laws, they ARE laws.

It's been determined that I must have a defective unit. Compared to another HT that hears and talks better, this determination was made. There is probably not another to be found by now. I will just have to return this one and order a VX-5R. I'll look through the AES catalog they automatically send you and find a good 6/2 meter allmode with about 50 watts. Or maybe a 706MKIIG since code is going away...

I'll just put my 420 in a bag <: and keep it clean and unscratched before I return it on Monday. I need it for the next 48 hours. The HTX-420 that is!!!!

No, Eric has it rght. Rules and regulations carry the force of law. None has been considered and passed into public law, rather a single law confering onto those rules and regulations the force of law.

I lean towards Yaesu products these days. I think the VX-5R would be an excellent choice for a handheld (the more expensive VX-7R doesn't really give you anything more, as 220 is basically worthless, especially at 200mW). However, your consideration of the newer portables/mobiles is sound... As far as a portable/mobile, I've got a FT-817 - this all-mode device was a breakthru in size/price/capabilities; which, in my opinion, obsoleted the Icom 706 (which was a breakthru itself when it was released)... Now Yaesu has released an even more capable portable/mobile - the FT-857, and if I was in the market right now, I'd probably get that one... here are some reviews:

http://www.eham.net/reviews/detail/3046

This device is simply AMAZING... and, of course, there are mods:

http://www.mods.dk/select.php3?radio=Yaesu&model=FT-857&id=2717

I modified my FT-817... it was pretty easy.

Tell that to my DX-440, Pro-34, Pro-90 & Pro-2026.
All bought on clearance and no problems except for normal wear & usage.
I just put a new switch/volume pot in the Pro-34 last month. It took 10 years to finish that control off. Ordered 2. One is a spare for 2013.

I have plenty of other RS stuff that still works great. YMMV.

Food...shower...drive...communicate. Time for Field Day. Bye.

Then they are laws. If it looks like a duck, swims like a duck, quacks like a duck....

> None has been >considered and passed into public law, rather a single law confering onto those >rules and regulations the force of law.

Well, I checked with Webster:

law -- 1. all the rules of conduct established by the authority or custom of a nation, etc. 2. any one of such rules. 3. obedience to such rules. 4. the study of such rules..... ---"lay down the law" 1. to give orders authoritatively....

I also looked through a few online law dictionaries:

http://www.duhaime.org/dictionary/dict-l.htm#L
http://dictionary.law.com/definition2.asp?selected=1111&bold=||||
http://dictionary.lp.findlaw.com/scripts/results.pl?co=dictionary.lp.findlaw.com&topic=7e/7e837b5d2a954e82f31227c53fd80b3b http://august1.com/pubs/dict/l.htm

So they all say pretty much the same thing -- if it's enforcable, it's a law.
Maybe you can find something that says something different?

It met it then, so its legal now, as long as it doesn't cause undue interference.... Something Frank can't seem to do himself.

The last generation 300A amps, and its next generation 350Z amp all used Pi-L outputs.

Frank doesn't always know what he talks about, though.

Which tubed amplifiers of the mid and early 70s used a "proper tube"?

And why is it someone who chose to use a Palomar became:

"people that couldn't
> : afford an amp with a tube properly designed for power RF"

Seems if the amp works, at the level designed, and doesn't cause undue interferience, then it is a decent amp.... Regardless of the tube(s) employed.

The 300A does so, and continues to this day.

Seems funny how Ameritron was using a design very similiar in the 90s. Must be a cost-effective design that worked well, eh?

Ameritron only stopped using the tubes when they became NON cost effective (read this, supply of NOS tubes dried up).

OK, so that 40 watts max would be approximately 100 watts PEP.

And it will take 25 watts PEP in high power mode.

I don't use much carrier in my AM transmissions in the first place, Skipp.

And that makes the amp any worse? How many (honestly) radios on the market today don't have built in tuners, or the owners who purchase a radio today don't opt for the option of getting the tuner installed.

Agreed. But again, how many radios don't either have that option installed, or come with it pre-installed nowadays.

I have as well. And have tech notes that go along with it.

At one point, I had every Palomar amp that had been created.... but most have been sold off and I kept a couple of them for momentos.

Because some people operate QRP rigs when they start out in the amateur world.

You can actually purchase kits that operate at the magical 4 watt level, and ARRL manuals of yesteryear (vintage, 300A times) had many MANY construction articles for single band rigs that used CB type radio final PA transistors due to their emmense popularity during the CB craze.

OK if this particular Palomar amp is/was such a popular amateur amp why can't you discuss it on QRZ or rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors or other "non-CB" forum? Duh. The original poster won't give his callsign, Skipp won't give his callsign, and neither will you. Wonder why, LOL.

If it was such a popular amateur amp as toll freak said then theyd be on QRZ or ehamnet swapping info with hams about it. Instead they are hiding in a cb group. Why? Because they are keyclowns and its a keyclown amp. DOH.

In that case theres lots of amateur gear that -was- popular in the 70s, why is only info on the palomar 300A being sought out in a cb newsgroup?
Again the answer is because its keyclown gear and toll and his pals are keyclowns. Only a fool like you would think this particular amp is going to be put to legal use, LOL.

the laws.

The idea that rules and regulations are not laws is a fallacy that is coddled by anti-government malcontents. Their battle-cry is that the Constitution doesn't provide for the making of 'rules' or 'regulations', only 'laws', a semanitic spin based on the definition of 'law'. I really don't think that the authors of the Constitution intended the document to be legally interpreted by dummies, which is why they created the Judicial branch of government. And that branch has NEVER -- not ONCE in over 200 YEARS -- excluded from the definition of 'law' any rule, regulation, code, ordinance, or any other binding authority simply because it didn't include the word 'law' in the title. So no matter how -you- choose to define the word, the meaning is very clear to the rest of us, as well as to the US Government. But if you have a different definition, please post it.

That is to say, they will ignite the flame war and then sit back and watch the show.

Cagey net users quickly recognize trolls for what they are and warn their fellow posters that
"You are being trolled" (or words to that effect). However, since there is a constant influx of new users on the net, trolls are going to be able to entertain themselves for a long time to come.

Trolls crave attention, and they care not whether it is positive or negative. They see the Internet as a mirror into which they can gaze in narcissistic rapture.

An Internet "troll" is a person who delights in sowing discord on the Internet. He (and it is usually he) tries to start arguments and upset people. Trolls see Internet communications services as convenient venues for their bizarre game. For some reason, they don't "get" that they are hurting real people. To them, other Internet users are not quite human but are a kind of digital abstraction. As a result, they feel no sorrow whatsoever for the pain they inflict.

Indeed, the greater the suffering they cause, the greater their 'achievement' (as they see it).

Trolls are utterly impervious to criticism (constructive or otherwise). You cannot negotiate with them; you cannot cause them to feel shame or compassion; you cannot reason with them. They cannot be made to feel remorse. For some reason, trolls do not feel they are bound by the rules of courtesy or social responsibility.

Perhaps this sounds inconceivable. You may think, "Surely there is something I can write that will change them." But a true troll can not be changed by mere words.

If you want a deeper analysis than that, perhaps a psychologist can shed some additional light on the matter.

DO NOT FEED THE TROLL!"

Their trying to raise the sales tax here, also just raised the vehicle registration fee 3X. It's going to cost a couple of hundred dollars just to reg. my bike, I'm going to hate to see what it's going to cost for trucks.

BTW, I dont' have an aol account ass crack. Why not complain to AOL then
? please get the account canceled, so I can prove you a liar. Also please complain to comcast and tell them exactly what you think I am doing using aol throughtput then a news server
....ROFLMAO

Ill bet they laugh so hard at you when they research my posting history and it reveals that I never ever posted thru aol...Or any other service besides comcast please do me that favor ... What will you say then, is really what I want to know... Please TOS Away... I am begging you

That that means that there are thousands of people every day that break Fed. Regs. just by talking to someone over a hundred miles away. Everyone of them have small brains? Doubt it, but there are also lots of hams that think that rule is silly too, do they have small brains? Doubt it, just they don't agree with an out-dated law.

Ours isn't either. They raised the reg. by calling it a "fee", not a tax. Nice play on words, huh.

Semantics, Frankie, just semantics. Nothing is different. You say potato and I say pototo, to recall an old song.

Well look at that, landwhale is making a troll type rermark and deliberately trying to use as much band width as possible.

6033. I fixed a LAWNMOWER with CB parts !

Yeah I did. Push mower. The motor was loose from the case mount, and one out of the 3 case mounts for the motor was broke where the nut & bolt bolts it to the case. I used stainless steel mirror mount bolts to bolt it to the case, and I used OLD CB SLIDE MOUNT metal (those 1"x 4" metal pieces that are made to mount the CB to the slide mount that no one ever uses) with the metal slit hole in it to repair the broken frame, drilled it out a little for the bolt to go through, made the slide mount metal 2 pieces thick, and tightened it up and cut da grass ! You can fix yo lawn mower with CB parts, but you CAN'T fix CB's with lawn mower parts !

Yep, you better not. The SMT DOGGY I had from a customer to fix--a good super tech that had the equipment couldn't fix it, and I sent it to the manufacturer and THEY COULD NOT FIX IT either! Dey sent a brand new radio to replace it !

Moral of da story--DO NOT buy SMT CB's ! You MAY be VERY sorry ! Stay with 70's technology ! It will save your eyes!

It's a slang for 12 Watts P.E.P., which is the max legal output on 11-meter CB radio in SSB mode.

why are you comparing apples and tomatoes then?

the rules are clear, unless you have a license to operate in the section from 27.405 - 28.000 (which I KNOW for a fact no one here does), you open yourself up to litigation from the FCC, any commercial concern that may have operating privileges there or even the military (which does have some allocated spectrum there) this applies also for any frequency below 26.965 clear down to 12 meters (mostly commercial and marine band HF stuff).

you don't have the letter from the FCC saying you can operate there, its
the same as not having a license to drive a car on any street in america (radio operations are a privilege, not a right and onyone spouting otherwise really doesn't know what they are talking about).

if you want to show me where in the fcc rules it states that you can operate there, be my guest. otherwise, stick to 11 meters (the class D channels if you please) or get your ticket (amateur radio) and rgchew with a bunch of us on bands you only dreamed of operating.

p. field day was a blast. I made several contacts on 6 meters from here to south texas and even florida (on 25 watts and a homebuilt 2 element beam!)

when the original class D citizens band rules were codified, there wasn't an awareness of the physics behind the solar cycle, the MUF and the ionosphere. they were implimented during a time of low activity and thus the range was limited by the then current conditions.

The problem is, no one has ever gotten around to filing a "notice of rulemaking" to have that rule changed to account for those otherfactors (such as the solar cycle and its effect on the local nature of things (ionosphere, magnetosphere, etc).

as it is now, the fcc considers the 150 mile range limit on 11 meters to be unenforceable except when the band is "closed" (no skip). That is probably the only part of part 95 they won't cite you on for that reason.

meanwhile, the rest of the rules pertaining to the class D service still applies.

Dave!

I'd been wondering where you been.....

I've got a web site up, that I think you'd enjoy.

I hope the the dickens your on "Broadband", other wise the Music will be broken up.... two of them to look at...

http://mywebpages.comcast.net/k8cpa

also, you'll like:

Wrong, they knew but chose HF because VHF/UHF gear was not easily (read cheaply) manufactured and thus not widely available to the public.

No, it doesn't apply to any frequency down to 12 meter. Many of those frequencies are abandoned and not in use. Again, your claim holds only slight merit when referring to the US,,this forum is worldwide and so is cb. These "commercial" interests you speak of, IF they are to be found and IF they were to be interfered with, have no recourse against any ops outside the US and there exist plenty of those...

No, it's not the same at all,,you are comparing apples and tomatoes,,one has the possibility and probability to maim, injure and even kill when operated in a reckless and dangerous manner,,,,,,,,spouting otherwise when one really doesn't know what they are talking of is a two way street, Mr. Oyen.

Stick to hammie radio, better yourself, and clean your own backyard prior to attempting another how to operate.

radio, prehaps something with better rejection, perhaps a beam,,or maybe, give it up altogether if it makes you so upset,,a hoby is suppoosed to be enjoying and relaxing,,yet, you seem to fit the stereotypical mold of a lid harassing all that he fails to comprehend. Trust me, the majority of those in here want nothing to do with these "dream" frequencies you speak of, if you are the example of what to expect.

Your posts reveal much more than you intend..... ....That you misconstrue all who defend the mere idea or notion of freebanding as being an "illegal", illustrates malicious ignorance.

That you fail to differentiate between opinions and the free exchange of speech on a newsgroup (both legal) as compared to an illegal act, illustrates your insistence at remaining ignorant.

That you are readily and easily confounded and consumed as to what constitutes legal or illegal, illustrates you have much to learn in the way of communications.

Perhaps you should seek an elmer and contemplate improving your chosen communication technique. Determined ignorance is tough to overcome, but I do believe you can be helped.

Great advice. There's still many of us "hobbyists" who ragchew each evening and try to improve 11-meters by setting a good example. Amateur radio and CB need not be mutually exlusive.

> or get your ticket (amateur radio) and rgchew with > a bunch of us on bands you only dreamed of operating.

I assume that you mean HF because most (...but, by no means, all.) of the CB ops I know are not really interested in VHF/UHF operations. I encourage all those I befriend on the CB to beat that 5-wpm code test like an egg and meet me on 10 or 20 USB. Most "serious" 11-meter ops who have done so usually turn out to be fine hams. Take care now. :-)

Lest you attempt to insinuate, that you were somehow responsible for my "dissappearance", from this newsgroup, allow me to dispell that rumor before it even starts.

I have been here passively watching you froth over Frank, in the same manner (and with the same words) as you did with me. You are still as predicatble and one dimensional as ever. I just see no further point in feeding you what it is that you crave the most, and that's attention. Hopefully Frank will also eventually realize the futility in trying to reason with a sociopath, and do what I do, and that's just ignore you.....

I haven't posted as of late, simply because of the lack of radio topics. This group has become little more than backbiting and little squabbles. When someone needs some radio info, I'll be here to help......

>in the same manner (and with the same >words) as you did with me.

I didn't do anything with you Dave,,you did it to yourself and blaming me for your problems is what you and Frank and Lelnad and N8 do,,,,,you;re still smarting over your hypocritical remarks against what you miscontrue as illegal cb when it has been shown you do, and have done the same. You're a hammie that breaks the law. You're also pissed over the fictional voob's placing of you in the great company of N8 and Frankie and Lelnad...couple this with your immediate defense of n8 when he was popped by the FCC and you are in great company with the hypocritical lids N8, lelnad, wa3moj and Frank,,,just as the voob said, and we all know, the voob never lied,,right, Davie?

>You are still as predicatble and one >dimensional as ever. I just see no further point >in feeding you what it is that you crave the >most, and that's attention.

Then stop contradicting yourself by giving me the time of day and exercise some of that self-control you claim has no "further point".

>Hopefully Frank will also eventually realize the >futility in trying to reason with a sociopath,

Your anger has you suffering from delusions. Self-elevation to the point of rendering oneself incompetent is your strong point. Believing you somehow qualified yourself to "diagnose" a cartoon characters mental state and capacity by what is permitted you, is not.

>and

>do what I do, and that's just ignore you.....

Huh,,,,that's what you do,,,,hokay,,,now place it into the proper prosective you used to defend N8's jamming of repeaters and insistence of innocence.

>I haven't posted as of late, simply because of >the lack of radio topics. This group has >become little more than backbiting and little >squabbles. When someone needs some radio >info, I'll be here to help......

You really need not explain yourself, Davie...merely continue to ignore me as you so adeptly demonstrate. Sharing your feelings concerning how you view the group, yet continuing to hang around..,,makes you somewhat the masochist, Davie, yet you continue to fancy yourself qualified to judge others based on your own low morality..how drool.

>Dave

>"Sandbagger"

PS: The group is doing fine....most of us hook up in DX land on a regular basis....this group is part of our recreational therapy,,watching hammies like you bounce off the wall over conversations concerning practices that you have no power over, is better than television.

Proper vernacular confounds those who suffer comunicative deficits. A more compelling question might be, "Why do you allow the personality or identity of a post to become your issue?" It illustrates, once again, you are not interested in cb radio, but in the identities, nuances and personal lives of those who post here. You're a lid and a troll.

Gee, Frankie,,,didn't know you were so overtly concerned,,,,he can ascertain your claim,,,he merely has to post from that direct access again.,,,you mentioned "ISP". Your imagined battle to whcih you refer this constant "losing" appears to have resulted in each and every one of the voobs named faves losing posing accesses. Strange coincidences from the aliens and their signals, eh, Frankie? Think I'll go back to "losing" more often. It's funny at times and at others, mildly amusing.

Proper to what? A Dickens novel maybe. Or someone trying to sound like a fop.

Same reason you do.

I dont see you posting many cb related posts. Oh and freeband is not cb by the way.
